

EDITORIAL

It has been our pleasure to edit this the 1968 Volume of The Auckland University Law Review. At the outset we must express our thanks to the many people who lent us their invaluable assistance. Messrs P. T. Burns and J. A. Seymour acted as Faculty Advisors and were always available to give of their considerable experience in the editorial field. Miss Pauline Tapp and Mr Peter Skegg took over the task of editing the case note and book review sections, and we thank them for the considerable time and assistance rendered by them in this regard.

The 1968 volume of the Review is marked by a change of format. It was felt that this was desirable in view of the quality of the contributions to both the original Review and those which were forthcoming this year. This change of format meant that a heavy load fell on to the very capable shoulders of Anand Satyanand, our Business Manager. Our confidence in this direction was not misplaced. We do not hesitate to say that without his zeal, energy and not inconsiderable technical knowledge the editors would have had extreme difficulty in producing this Review.

The contributions offered the Editors have been of a high standard. We have limited our choice to papers presented either at an LL.M. or LL.B. (Hons) level. In particular LL.B. (Hons) seminars have produced papers of a uniformly high level, but unfortunately we have been forced to omit many detailed and meritorious papers on account of their length. It has been a source of satisfaction to the editors that we have been able to produce a Law Review based entirely on student contributions, and it is to be hoped that this policy will be continued.

In conclusion we should like to thank the printers for their advice and co-operation with this undertaking.
