

ACCIDENT COMPENSATION AMENDMENT BILL (NO. 2)

EXPLANATORY NOTE

This Bill amends the Accident Compensation Act 1972.

Clauses 7, 14, 15, 17, 20, 22, 24, and 32 implement recommendations of the Cabinet/Caucus Committee to review the Accident Compensation Act.

Clause 1: Subclause (1) relates to the Short Title.

Subclause (2) states that, except as otherwise provided, these provisions are to come into force on 1 October 1981.

Clause 2 omits references to future liabilities of the Fund from the matters the Corporation is required to make recommendations to the Minister.

Clause 3: Section 63 of the principal Act provides that in certain cases disablement or death of a member of the Armed Forces during or attributable to a war or emergency is covered by the principal Act. There is no provision in the section however to determine when the "accident" happened.

This clause rewrites the section to provide that, in the case of disablement, the accident is deemed to have happened at the commencement of the period in respect of the disablement pension is payable, and, in the case where the pension is payable in respect of death, at the time of death. The revised section also makes it clear that the section applies in respect of a person who is no longer in the Armed Forces at the time of the determination.

Clause 4: At present under section 67 of the principal Act compensation for diseases arising out of employment is subject to various restrictions regarding the length of time between the date the claimant ceases the employment and the date of commencement of the incapacity.

This clause rewrites the section to remove these restrictions where that employment ceases on or after 1 October 1981.

Clause 5: Section 74 of the principal Act prescribes the maximum amount on which levies are payable by an employer in respect of the wages of any employee, and also authorises this amount to be amended by the Governor-General from time to time by Order in Council, but such amount so prescribed is not to differ by more than 20 percent from the amount prescribed by the section.

This clause removes the restriction on the amount that may be prescribed by Order in Council.

Clauses 6, 8, and 9 relate to the elimination of the additional initial levy previously payable by self-employed persons.

At present this has been effected by regulations made pursuant to section 181 (1) (g) of the principal Act. These regulations are revoked by clause 10.

Clause 7 enables a full-time self-employed person (as defined) to elect to pay the levy based on the amount which represents the average ordinary time weekly wage as disclosed by the Department of Labour in the previous May, and to receive compensation on that basis under the new section 113A of the principal Act (see clause 17) for a period of 12 months commencing on the 7th day of September in any year.

However the election otherwise due by 7 September 1981 is to be delivered by 7 November 1981, and the compensation on the new basis is to be payable for a 10 month period until 6 September 1982.

Clause 11 increases the maximum fine for most offences to $500.

Clause 12 amends section 104 of the principal Act, which deals with relevant earnings,—

- (a) By omitting the provision relating to the automatic increases in relevant earnings following a General Wage Order;
- (b) By providing for relevant earnings to be ascertained at date of incapacity where any period of incapacity does not arise at the date of the accident.

This clause applies in respect of any period of incapacity arising on or after 1 October 1981.

Clause 13 rewrites sections 107, 108, and 109 of the principal Act which relate to costs of conveyance for medical treatment and payment of earnings related compensation for working hours lost while receiving medical attention.

The clause distinguishes between accidents happening in New Zealand and those happening outside New Zealand. It makes it clear that payment for conveyance for medical attention when the accident happens outside New Zealand to a person who has cover under the Act is discretionary.

This clause is to apply in relation to any accident occurring on or after 1 October 1981.

Clause 14 provides that the injured person is to pay the cost of each of the first 2 visits to a general medical practitioner (as defined), not being an amount in excess of $5 or such other amount as may be prescribed from time to time by the Governor-General by Order in Council in respect of each such visit.

Where the injury was caused to an employee in the course of his employment, the employer is to refund to the employee the amounts so paid.

This clause is to apply in relation to any accident occurring on or after 1 April 1982.

Clause 15: Section 112 of the principal Act provides that while an employee is unable to work due to personal injury arising out of and in the course of his employment, the employer is to pay the employee during the first week after the personal injury the full amount of his normal wages.

This amendment provides that the employer is now to pay 80 percent of those normal wages for the first 2 weeks.

This clause is to apply in relation to any accident occurring on or after 1 April 1982.

Clause 16: Section 113 of the principal Act prescribes the maximum amount of earnings related compensation that may be payable to any person, and also authorises this amount to be amended by the Governor-General from time to time by Order in Council, but such amount so prescribed is not to differ by more than 20 percent from the amount prescribed by the section.

This amendment removes the restriction on the amount that may be prescribed by Order in Council.

Clause 17 provides that any full-time self-employed person who so elects pursuant to the new section 78A of the principal Act (see clause 7) is entitled to receive compensation on the basis that his relevant earnings were equal to the amount of the average latest ordinary time weekly wage as disclosed by the Department of Labour at the time of the accident.

Compensation is to be payable for a period of 13 weeks on that basis without proof of loss of earning capacity, and thereafter with proof of such loss.

This clause is to apply from 7 September 1981.

Clause 18 repeals section 114 of the principal Act which provides for assessment of permanent incapacity and makes consequential amendments to other provisions of the principal Act.

This amendment will avoid the necessity of requiring the Corporation to assess the future prospects of the injured person in regard to loss of earnings, and to pay only in respect of the actual loss.

This clause is to apply in relation to any accident occurring on or after 1 April 1982.

Clause 19: Section 118 of the principal Act provides for compensation for loss of potential earning capacity in certain cases. Where an injured person had a definite arrangement to commence work and this is prevented by the injury, earnings related compensation of up to $100 per week is payable, even if the proposed work was on a part-time basis only.

This clause provides that the maximum amount is payable only where the proposed work is for 30 hours or more and is to be reduced proportionately for shorter hours.

This clause is to apply in relation to any accident occurring on or after 1 October 1981.

Clause 20 rewrites section 119 of the principal Act which deals with lump sum compensation for non-economic loss related to permanent loss or impairment of bodily function and repeals section 120 of the principal Act which deals with lump sum compensation for other non-economic loss.

At present the appropriate percentage (as set out in the Second Schedule) of $7,000 is payable under section 119, and up to $10,000 under section 120 in respect of pain and suffering, loss of enjoyment of life, etc.

The new section 119 sets up a new system whereby the amount payable under the Second Schedule is the appropriate percentage of $17,000, and no amount is payable specifically for pain and suffering, loss of enjoyment of life, etc. Provision is made for compensation up to a maximum of $17,000 to be payable in cases which are not covered by the Schedule.

A further change is that no payment is to be made where the percentage of the lump sum compensation otherwise payable in respect of all injuries caused by one accident is less than 15 percent.

This clause is to apply in relation to any accident occurring on or after 1 April 1982.

Clause 21 amends the provisions relating to compensation for pecuniary loss not related to earnings.

Subclause (1): Section 121 (1) (a) provides that no compensation is payable in respect of any loss in respect of damage to property. In the case of A.C.C. v. Nelson it was held that the loss of goodwill in respect of a one-man company was not covered by this paragraph and that compensation was therefore payable.

This amendment widens the scope of section 121 (1) (a) to ensure that damage to all kinds of property is excluded.

Subclause (2): Section 121 (2) (a) provides that compensation is payable to any member of the household of an injured or deceased person for any quantifiable loss of service suffered by that person. In the case of Kivi v. A.C.C. it was held that this included the loss of services to a widow in respect of the labour costs to be incurred in carrying out house and property improvements that her husband had proposed doing.

This amendment restricts the compensation to weekly payments in respect of loss of quantifiable services of a domestic or household nature that was previously provided on a regular basis.

This clause is to apply in relation to any accident occurring on or after 1 October 1981.

Clause 22 provides that where a person who is in receipt of or entitled to receive earnings related compensation is absent from New Zealand for more than 12 months, the Corporation shall from time to time review the amount payable, and may continue, reduce, or postpone the payment, or may commute it to a lump sum. The criteria the Corporation is to take into account is set out in subsection (2) of the substituted section 130.

Clause 23: Subclause (1) empowers the Corporation to set-off against compensation payable to any person amounts owing by him in respect of compensation overpaid.

Subclause (2) provides that section 135 of the principal Act, which states that compensation is not assignable, is not to affect section 104 of the Domestic Proceedings Act 1963, which deals with receiving orders made where any money is in arrear under a maintenance order.

Clause 24 inserts a new section 138A in the principal Act that provides that where in the course of and as a result of committing any offence, being—

(a) Any offence under section 58 of the Transport Act 1962 (driving with excessive breath alcohol or blood-alcohol concentration or while under the influence of drink or drugs); or

(b) Any offence for which the maximum penalty is life imprisonment or of a term of imprisonment of 2 years or more,—

any person suffers personal injury by accident and is convicted of the offence and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, cover is to exist under the principal Act but no compensation is to be payable.

Where the Corporation has reason to suspect that any injury was suffered during the course of and as a result of any such offence, it may refuse to pay compensation for 12 months after the date of the accident or, where the injured person has been charged but not tried for the offence, for such longer period as the Corporation determines.

This clause is to apply in relation to any accident occurring on or after 1 October 1981.

Clause 25 inserts a new section 142A in the principal Act empowering Hospital Boards to supply accident statistics to the Corporation.

Clause 26: Section 154 (14) of the principal Act provides that, on an application for review, the Corporation may, in certain cases allow reasonable costs to the applicant.

This amendment provides that this power may also be exercised by the Hearing Officer, and that regulations may be made prescribing the circumstances in which and the extent to which such costs are payable.

Clause 27 corrects a drafting error.

Clause 28 provides for the Corporation to refund to the Justice Department the costs of providing administrative services to the Accident Compensation Appeal Authority.

Clause 29: Section 166 deals with the award of costs by the Appeal Authority.

This clause empowers the Authority, following an application for an adjournment of a fixture for an appeal made by either the Corporation or the appellant, to order the party requesting the adjournment to pay such sum for costs as it considers reasonable, where it considers that, in the interests of justice, the adjournment should be allowed but will cause inconvenience or expense to any person, including the Authority.

Clause 30 enables the Corporation to set-off against compensation payable any other compensation or rehabilitation assistance overpaid or any levies due.

It also increases the amount of overpaid compensation and underpaid levy which may be written off without consideration of possible recovery from $2 to $10, and provides that the power of set-off is subject to rights of review and appeal.

Clause 31 amends the First Schedule to the principal Act to include certain amendments previously made by Order in Council.

This clause is to apply as stated in subclauses (2) and (3).

Clause 32 transfers all the assets and liabilities of the Uninsured Employers Claims Account and the Occupational Safety Trust Account to the Corporation.

Hon. Mr Bolger

“Provided that if, in a case where the pension is payable in respect of death, a pension (being a pension to which the foregoing provisions of this subsection relate) has become payable in respect of any period prior to the death by reason of the disablement of the deceased person, the Corporation may (subject to Part VII of this Act) determine that the death resulted from personal injury by accident happening at such time prior to the death (not being earlier than the commencement of the period for which the pension in respect of disablement was payable) as appears most appropriate, having regard to all the relevant circumstances, including the extent (if any) to which the death was attributable to any disablement in respect of which that pension was payable and the time as at which that pension commenced to be payable in respect of any disablement to which the death was attributable:

(2) Section 63 (4) of the principal Act is hereby amended 10 by omitting the expression “109”.

4. Compensation for diseases arising out of employment—
The principal Act is hereby further amended by repealing section 67, and substituting the following section:

“67. (1) Where an earner’s total or partial incapacity for 15 work or an earner’s death results from any disease, and the disease is due to the nature of any employment in which the earner was employed during a period that ended on or after the 1st day of October 1981, cover shall exist, rehabilitation assistance shall be given and compensation shall be 20 payable as if the disease were a personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, and all the provisions of this Act shall apply accordingly subject, however, to the provisions of this section.

“(2) For the purpose of calculating the relevant earnings 25 of an earner in a claim for any compensation under this section, the date of the commencement of the incapacity or, if there is more than one period of incapacity, the date of the commencement of each period of incapacity of the earner (or the date of his death if there has been no previous period 30 of incapacity) shall be treated as the date of the happening of the accident, if he is then engaged in any employment; and if he is not then so engaged the last day on which he was so engaged shall for this purpose be treated as the date of the 35 happening of the accident.

“(3) For all the other purposes of this Act, the date of the commencement of the incapacity or, if there is more than one period of incapacity, the date of the commencement of each period of incapacity of the earner (or the date of his death if there has been no previous period of incapacity) 40 shall be treated as the date of the happening of the accident:

“Provided that, where more than one period of incapacity occurs in the employment of the same employer, only the date of commencement of the first period of incapacity with that employer shall be treated, for the purposes of section 5 112 of this Act, as the date of the happening of the accident.

“(4) If any earner contracts any disease in respect of which he would be entitled to a miner’s benefit under the Social Security Act 1964, he shall not be entitled to receive any earnings related compensation under this Act in respect of 10 that disease for any period for which he receives the miner’s benefit, or to receive a miner’s benefit for any period for which he receives any earnings related compensation under this Act.

“(5) Nothing in this section shall affect the right of any 15 person to recover compensation in respect of a disease if the disease is a personal injury by accident within the meaning of this Act.”

5. Maximum amount on which levies are payable—with this subsection, that levy shall be calculated at the appropriate rate prescribed in accordance with section 72 of this Act on the earnings shown in the statement or on the prescribed amount, whichever is the greater.

“(3) Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing provisions of this section but subject to any regulations made under this Act, if any self-employed person (with the consent of the Commissioner of Inland Revenue) changes the date of the annual balance of his accounts for the purposes of furnishing a return of income under the Income Tax Act 1976, he shall comply with such requirements concerning the delivery of statements and payment of levies as shall, in the opinion of the Corporation, be necessary in order to effect consequential adjustments and as shall be notified to him in writing.

“(4) In this section:

(2) Section 71 of the principal Act is hereby consequentially amended—

(a) By omitting from subsection (1) the words “and, except as stated in section 78 of this Act, shall be payable at the rate or rates prescribed under section 72 of this Act” (as substituted by section 28 (2) (a) of the Accident Compensation Amendment Act (No. 2) 1973), and substituting the words “and shall be payable at the rate or rates prescribed under section 72 of this Act”:

5 (b) By omitting from subsection (2) the words “in accordance with section 78 of this Act” (as substituted by section 28 (2) (b) of the Accident Compensation Amendment Act (No. 2) 1973), and substituting the words “in accordance with section 78 or section 78A of this Act”.

30 (7) The Accident Compensation Amendment Act 1978 is hereby consequentially amended by repealing section 5.

7. Election by full-time self-employed persons—The principal Act is hereby further amended by inserting, after section 78, the following section:

35 “78A. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, any full-time self-employed person may—

(3) This section shall come into force on the day that this Act receives the Governor-General’s assent. 40

8. Adjustments on cessation—The principal Act is hereby further amended by repealing section 79, and substituting the following section:

“79. Subject to any regulations made under this Act, where statements are delivered pursuant to subsection (6) of section 77 of this Act, the Corporation shall determine what adjustments (if any) are to be made, whether by way of
5 refund by the Corporation of any amount of levy which, in the determination of the Corporation, has been paid in excess, or by payment by the employer of any amount of levy which, in the determination of the Corporation, should be paid and shall notify the employer in writing of its determination,
10 whereupon either such refund (if any) as, in the determination of the Corporation, is to be made, shall forthwith be made by the Corporation, or the employer shall forthwith pay the amount of levy (if any) which, in the determination of the Corporation, should be paid.”

15 9. Agent to pay levies to Corporation—Section 81 of the principal Act is hereby amended by repealing subsections (1) and (2), and substituting the following subsections:

“ (1) Subject to this Act, where an employer is required under sections 76 to 80 of this Act, to deliver a statement
20 and pay a levy, the levy shall be paid not later than the last day allowed for delivering the statement by reference to which the levy is calculated.

“ (2) If any levy payable by an employer or a self-employed person is not paid on or before the last day allowed
25 for payment thereof, or if any levy in respect of which the Corporation causes notice of an assessment or amended assessment to be given under section 83 (4) of this Act, is not paid on or before the last day allowed for the payment thereof, a penalty of 10 percent of the amount unpaid in respect of the 30 levy shall be added to that amount, and shall be recoverable as if it were part of the levy:

“ Provided that the Corporation may remit all or part of any such penalty, if, in the special circumstances of any case,
35 it thinks it fair and reasonable to do so, and if the amount so remitted has been paid, it shall be dealt with in accordance with section 106 of this Act in such manner provided for by that section as the Corporation thinks fit.”

40 The Accident Compensation Self-Employed Levy Payment Regulations 1979 are hereby revoked.

11. Fines and penalties—(1) The principal Act is hereby further amended—
