

POLICE OFFENCES AMENDMENT BILL

EXPLANATORY NOTE

PART I of this Bill deals with offences relating to sedition. Part II deals with intimidation, including assaults on workers, the unlawful display of certain posters, badges, &c., and picketing.

PART I

SEDITION

Clause 3 prohibits the making or publication of any statement inciting or advocating violence, lawlessness, or disorder, or expressing a seditious intention. "Seditious intention" is defined in clause 2.

Clause 4 makes it unlawful for a person to be a party to a seditious conspiracy, that is, an agreement to carry out a seditious intention.

Clause 5 makes it unlawful for any person, with a seditious intention, to print, publish, sell, or distribute, or to have for sale or distribution, or to bring into New Zealand, any document or other matter that incites or advocates violence, lawlessness, or disorder, or that expresses a seditious intention. Subclause (2) provides that proof of possession of any such document or matter is to be proof of possession for sale or distribution, unless the defendant can show that his possession of it was contrary to his desire or was for the purpose of delivering it to the police or a proper authority, or for some other lawful purpose, or that the circumstances raise a reasonable doubt whether he had it for sale or distribution. Under subclause (3A), a prosecution under this clause is not to be taken without the consent of the Attorney-General.

Under clause 6 a person having possession or control of a printing press or any other apparatus commits an offence if he uses it, or causes or permits it to be used, for printing or publishing anything expressing a seditious intention. Where a person is proved to have been in actual occupation or in charge of any place where there was any such press or apparatus, that is evidence from which the Court may infer that the press or apparatus was in his possession or under his control, in the absence of satisfactory evidence to the contrary (subclause (2)). If it is also proved that any seditious document was found there or in the possession of the defendant or of any person at that place, and that the document could have been printed or made on or by means of the press or apparatus, those facts are to be proof that the defendant caused or permitted the use of the apparatus, unless he can show that it was not used for the document, or that the document was made without his knowledge or consent, or unless the evidence raises a reasonable doubt whether he caused or permitted the use of the apparatus (subclause (3)).

Enforcement and Legal Proceedings

Clause 7A provides that persons committing or reasonably suspected of committing offences under this Part may be arrested without warrant.

Clause 8 authorizes the issue of search warrants by a Justice of the Peace. Subclause (2A) limits the power of search to the daytime, unless the Justice of the Peace is satisfied that the ends of justice require search to be made by night.

Clause 9 provides for maximum penalties of three months' imprisonment or a fine of £100, or both, on summary conviction before a Magistrate. Subclause (2A) extends the usual time limit for laying informations to one year.

The effect of clause 10 is that bail is not to be allowed on an appeal against a conviction involving imprisonment, unless the Magistrate so directs. An appellant who does not receive bail is then in the same position as an appellant under the Criminal Appeal Act 1945. He is entitled, pending the determination of the appeal, to be treated as a person in custody awaiting trial, or may be admitted to bail by the Supreme Court if it thinks fit.

Clause 11 preserves the liability of an offender to be proceeded against under any other Act, with the exception that he is not to be punished twice for the same offence. By subclause (2), the defences of previous conviction or previous acquittal are expressly made available to persons prosecuted under this Part and subsequently prosecuted under the Crimes Act, or vice versa.

Under clause 12A, articles seized by a constable under this Part are to be forfeited or returned or disposed of, as the Magistrate orders. If no prosecution is taken within two months after their seizure, the Magistrate may make such an order on the application of any claimant. Any claimant may appeal to the Supreme Court against a Magistrate's order.

PART II

INTIMIDATION

Clause 14 relates to assaults on workers, and is in substitution for section 201 (b) of the Justices of the Peace Act 1927, which is now out of date.

Clause 15 makes unlawful certain acts of intimidation, including the publication or distribution of insulting or offensive documents, if those acts are done with intent to induce or influence a person, or by reason of his having failed or refused, to stay away from his work or his residence, or to be a party to a strike or a lockout (as defined in clause 13). Under subclause (4), proof that the defendant did the act complained of, and that he was a party to or supporting a strike or a lockout, is to be evidence from which the Court may infer, in the absence of satisfactory evidence to the contrary, that he did the act with the intent or for the reason alleged in the prosecution. Under subclause (5), proof of possession of any document to which the section applies is to be proof of possession for sale or distribution, unless the defendant can show that his possession of it was contrary to his desire or was for the purpose of delivering it to the police or a proper authority or for some other lawful purpose, or that the circumstances raise a reasonable doubt whether he had it for sale or distribution.

Clause 16 relates to the display of any words or device intended or likely to result in the victimization of any person, or the boycotting of any person for the purpose of furthering a strike or a lockout, or inciting or likely to incite or influence persons to strike or to lock out or to cease work, or likely to expose any person to hatred or contempt amongst the public or any class of persons; and also to the display of any intimidatory, offensive, or insulting words or device (subclause (3)). An offence is committed by any person who displays where it may be seen any banner, placard, sign, badge, card, or other thing bearing any such words or device, or who writes or displays any such words or device on a vehicle, wall, building, road, or footway, or otherwise where it may be seen (subclauses (1) and (2)).

Clause 17A gives to members of the Police Force of or above the rank of sergeant power to prevent picketing in a public place, if in their opinion the picketing is intended or likely to influence any person to stay away from his work or to stop work, or to be a party to a strike or a lockout.

Clause 18 authorizes a member of the Police Force of or above the rank of sergeant to prohibit a procession or demonstration in, or within view of, a public place, if he is satisfied that it is likely to incite anyone to be a party to a strike or a lockout.

Enforcement and Legal Proceedings

Clause 19A provides that persons committing or reasonably suspected of committing offences under this Part may be arrested without warrant.

Clause 20 authorizes the issue of search warrants by a Justice of the Peace. Subclause (2) limits the power of search to the daytime, unless the Justice of the Peace is satisfied that the ends of justice require search to be made by night.

Clause 21 provides for maximum penalties of three months' imprisonment or a fine of £100, or both, on summary conviction before a Magistrate. Subclause (2A) extends the usual time limit for laying informations to one year.

Clause 22 preserves the liability of an offender to be proceeded against under any other Act, with the exception that he is not to be punished twice for the same offence.

Under clause 23A, articles seized by a constable under this Part are to be forfeited or returned or disposed of, as the Magistrate orders. If no prosecution is taken within two months after their seizure, the Magistrate may make such an order on the application of any claimant. Any claimant may appeal to the Supreme Court against a Magistrate's order.
