

RESERVE BANK OF NEW ZEALAND AMENDMENT BILL

EXPLANATORY NOTE

THIS Bill amends the Reserve Bank of New Zealand Act 1964. It reaffirms the sovereign right of the crown to control currency and credit for the purpose of maintaining a stable value for money and in the public interest, and defines more fully and extends the functions, powers, and duties of the Reserve Bank of New Zealand.

Clause 1 relates to the Short Title and commencement. Clause 7 is deemed to have come into force on 22 June 1972, and subject to this the Act is to come into force on 1 August 1973.

Clause 2: Subclause (1) inserts definitions of "authorised money-market dealer" and "financial institution" in section 2 of the principal Act.

Subclause (2) substitutes a new definition of "trading bank" in section 2 of the principal Act. The new definition omits the reference to persons declared to be trading banks under section 36 of that Act, and is consequential on the repeal of that section by clause 13.

Clause 3: Subclause (1) re-enacts in an amended form section 4 (1) of the principal Act defining the constitution of the Reserve Bank. The only change is the inclusion of a provision that the appointed directors are to include one or more persons having industrial or commercial experience.

Subclause (2) repeals section 4 (3) of the principal Act, which is now spent.

Clause 4 re-enacts in an amended form section 6 of the principal Act relating to the executive committee of the Bank. The committee is to consist of the Governor, the Deputy Governor, the Secretary to the Treasury, and an appointed director of the Bank, who, instead of acting by the direction of the Bank (which is the present provision), is to be nominated by the Minister of Finance and will hold office during the pleasure of the Minister.

The appointed director who is a member of the executive committee will by virtue of holding that office be a director of the Bank of New Zealand. The Bank of New Zealand Act 1945 is amended by subclause (2) by adding to its directorate the appointed director of the Reserve Bank who is a member of its executive committee.

The new section 6 also contains the following new provisions:

- (a) Provision is made for the appointment by the Minister of a deputy of the appointed director who is a member of the executive committee.
- (b) The executive committee may, and shall at the request of the Minister, confer with the Minister on any matter coming within the scope of section 8 of the principal Act, relating to the primary functions of the Bank.

Clause 5 re-enacts in an amended form section 8 of the principal Act, which defines the primary functions of the Reserve Bank. The new section contains the following new provisions:

- (a) Subsection (1) (b) is new. Under that paragraph it will be a primary function of the Bank to ensure that the availability and conditions of credit provided by financial institutions are not inconsistent with the sovereign right of the Crown to control money and credit in the public interest.
- (b) Subsection (2) provides that for the purposes of the Act the Minister of Finance may communicate to the Bank the monetary policy of the Government, which shall be directed to the maintenance and promotion of economic and social welfare in New Zealand, having regard to the desirability of promoting the highest level of production and trade and full employment and of maintaining a stable internal price level. This subsection is substantially the same as the existing provision, except that the existing reference to "employment" has been replaced by a reference to "full employment".
- (c) Subsection (3) (a) provides that the Bank shall, as directed by the Minister, regulate and control, on behalf of the Government, money, banking, banking transactions, any class of transactions of financial institutions, credit, currency, and the borrowing and lending of money. The provisions relating to transactions of financial institutions and the borrowing and lending of money are not in the present section. This paragraph will empower the Bank to regulate credit from all sources and not just bank credit.
- (d) Subsection (4) is new. It provides that the Bank shall make loans to the Government, on such conditions as the Minister decides, in order to ensure the continuing full employment of labour and other resources.

Clause 6 re-enacts in an amended form section 24 (2) of the principal Act making it an offence to reproduce or imitate bank notes without the prior authority of the Reserve Bank. Under the existing provisions, it is not an offence unless the reproduction or imitation purports to be the whole or part of a bank note or so nearly resembles the whole or part of a bank note as to be likely to deceive.

The new provision makes it an offence to reproduce or publish in any form, without the authority of the Bank, any thing resembling or having a likeness to the whole or any part of a bank note.

Clause 7: Subclause (1) re-enacts in an amended form section 26 of the principal Act relating to the indemnity arrangement between the Reserve Bank and the Government in the event of an exchange rate adjustment.

The present section 26 is not appropriate to deal with floating exchange rates, and the new section is designed to apply in such cases and to enable the position to be adjusted from time to time in the event of any prolonged floating of any one or more major currencies.

The new section will enable the Minister to declare a rate between any such currency and the New Zealand dollar for the purpose of making a settlement between the Bank and the Government, calculated on the basis of the Bank's assets and liabilities on the day before the day on which the rate is declared.

This clause is deemed to have come into force on 22 June 1972 in order to validate a settlement made subsequent to the floating of sterling in that month.

Clause 8 inserts a new section 26A in the principal Act enabling the Governor of the Bank, with the prior consent of the Minister, to suspend foreign exchange business on the ground that it is necessary or expedient in the public interest to do so.

At present, an Order in Council is necessary to suspend dealings in foreign exchange and to recommence foreign exchange business, but the new section will enable appropriate action to be taken at short notice.

The section includes provisions protecting contractual relationships at the time of the suspension of dealings in any foreign exchange.

Clause 9 inserts a new section 34A in the principal Act conferring power on the Reserve Bank, with the consent of the Minister, to control lending of financial institutions other than trading banks, and empowers the Governor-General in Council to fix interest rates of financial institutions other than trading banks. The Reserve Bank has powers in respect of trading banks under sections 33 and 34 of the principal Act.

The effect of the new section 34A is as follows:

- (a) The Bank may make recommendations to financial institutions as to the policy to be followed in their business.
- (b) The Bank may give directions to any class or classes of financial institutions as to the policy to be followed in relation to lending and investments.
- (c) Those directions may relate to the aggregate amounts of lending and investments considered appropriate by the Bank, and to the classes of loans that should be encouraged or restricted or refused, and the classes of investments that may or may not be made or held.
- (d) Orders in Council may be made specifying the rates of interest to be paid to or by financial institutions. Such rates are at present fixed by Orders in Council under other Acts, and the provisions of those Acts relating to those rates are repealed by clause 14.

Clause 10 inserts a new section 34B in the principal Act conferring on the Reserve Bank power to obtain information as to the assets and liabilities of financial institutions. The Bank has at present certain powers in this respect under section 37 of the principal Act (which is being repealed by clause 14 (1)), but the new section 34B contains powers parallel to those conferred by the present section 37 and with a coverage similar to that conferred by repealed sections relating to trustee savings banks, private savings banks, building societies, and finance companies.

The effect of the new section 34B is as follows:

- (a) The Bank may, with the consent of the Minister, require any financial institution or any class of financial institution to supply to the Bank such returns or information relating to the assets and liabilities of their business as are specified in a notice given by the Bank.
- (b) The classes of financial institutions in respect of which those powers may be exercised are to be prescribed by the Minister by notice in the Gazette.

Clause 11 inserts a new section 34c in the principal Act enabling Orders in Council to be made requiring financial institutions (other than trading banks) to hold assets in the form of balances at a trading bank or with the Reserve Bank, or Government or local authority securities, or assets of such other kind as are specified in the order, of such minimum amount as are specified in the order.

At present, power to require certain financial institutions to hold specified investments is contained in section 28A of the principal Act (which relates to finance companies as defined in regulations under that section), section 24 (4) of the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1948, section 17 (3) of the Private Savings Banks Act 1964, and sections 55A and 57 (7) of the Building Societies Act 1965. Life Insurance companies are covered by a voluntary arrangement. The existing empowering provisions are repealed by clause 14, but existing orders and regulations made under those provisions are continued in force by the savings provisions in subclause (5) of that clause.

Clause 12 amends section 35 of the principal Act, which confers on the Reserve Bank power to inspect the books and accounts and other records of trading banks, and to require trading banks to supply to the Reserve Bank information required by the Reserve Bank.

Subclause (1) extends those provisions to apply to other financial institutions also.

Subclause (2) contains specific provisions as to the penalty for failing to comply with a requirement of the Reserve Bank under section 35, and provides that the section will not authorise the inspection of any books or accounts which, in accordance with accepted banking practice, a banker is not obliged to disclose without the consent of the customer concerned. At present the penalty and protection in section 35 are not set out in that section, but are prescribed by applying the provisions of subsections (6) and (7) of section 31 with the necessary modifications.

Clause 13 repeals section 36 of the principal Act, which empowers the Governor-General in Council to declare certain persons to be trading banks.

Clause 14 provides for consequential repeals and amendments, and continues in force any regulations or orders made under the repealed provisions as if they had been made under the corresponding provisions of the Bill.

The enactments repealed include provisions relating to rates of interest (for which provision now appears in the new section 34A inserted by clause 9), the requirement as to investments in Government and other securities (for which provision now appears in the new section 34C inserted by clause 11), and provisions as to the inspection of books, accounts, and records and the giving of information (for which provision now appears in section 35, as amended by clause 12).

- 20 according to the term of the obligation, or to different classes of deposits, borrowing, or lending as defined in the order, or to the amount of such deposit, borrowing, or lending.
- “ (5) If any financial institution without lawful justification or excuse fails to comply with any direction or order given
- 25 or made under subsection (2) or subsection (4) of this section, it commits an offence, and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding $4,000 and, if the offence is a continuing one, to a further fine not exceeding $2,000 for every day on which the offence has continued.”

30 has continued:
