Mean earth temperature at 1 ft. 67·5°; and at 3 ft. 64·5°. Number of rain days, 11. Total rainfall, $.84 per cent. above normal. The latter days were varied. Over most of the country there were excesses, but slight deficiencies occurred in a few scattered places in the South Island. About Northern Hawke's Bay and Poverty Bay the deficiencies were rather more pronounced.

The weekend 12th-15th was a stormy one. Some days previously a cyclone had developed off the North Queensland coast and then moved slowly towards New Caledonia and appeared to be filling up; but on the morning of the 13th it was situated near Norfolk Island it began to deepen rapidly and to move with more than usual speed along a southerly course. At 6 a.m. on the 14th it was centred over the middle of the North Island at 42°44' S. and twenty-four hours later it was off the east coast of Otago. During the night 13th-14th strong north-easterly gales were experienced over the Auckland Province, while substantial falls of snow occurred in the Mackenzie Country. Widespread but mainly minor damage resulted from the winds.

A feature of the situation for over a week was the depression of the north-east Pacific which remained centred to the east south of New Zealand. Fresh easterlies continued to blow over the Auckland Peninsula, where the weather stayed cloudy with scattered but fairly heavy rains, while elsewhere fair weather prevailed. On the 21st winds were becoming north-westerly and the weather generally was dull with scattered rain, but during the 22nd conditions improved.

With a complex system of disturbances crossing the Dominion during the 24th and 25th, north-easterly to northerly winds freshened from Cook Strait northwards, some heavy rain falling in western districts. A deeper disturbance was located to the south on the 26th and winds, now north-north-west, increased to gale force in places and conditions were unsettled. Over an extensive area barometers were very low, while in the New Zealand region the situation was a well-developed one of the westerly type with some periods of windy and showery weather with scattered thunderstorms.

For example, on the 31st a sharp rise of pressure in the south turned winds to the south-west and the weather improved, although temperatures were cooler.
