I, Gilbert Graham Hodgkins, the Deputy Registrar-General of Marriages for the Dominion of New Zealand, hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the list of Officiating Ministers under the Marriage Act, 1908, for the year 1940.

Given under my hand at Wellington, this 23rd day of January, 1940.

G. G. HODGKINS, Deputy Registrar-General.

Mean earth temperature at 1 ft., 61·7°; and at 3 ft., 60·9°. Number of rain days, 11. Total rainfall, 410 per cent. above normal, being a record for Wellington. Sunshine, 47 per cent. of the possible. Mean dew-point at 9 a.m., 53·3°; mean vapour pressure, 0·407 in.

Pressure Systems. On the 11th there were thunderstorms in the Hawkes' Bay region. In the North Island where very satisfactory crops of ensilage and hay have been harvested. Tho land over the greater part -

General. For the whole December was the wettest of any month since records were first taken. In the South Island there were rainfall deficits, most of the precipitation came in substantial falls and the rain had refreshing effects, sustaining good pasture growth, especially of Canterbury and Otago has continued too dry for the cereal crops, and with the feed shortage the autumn prospects are poor.

Some departures in Otago exceeded 4° F. Humid conditions over a part of the month gave cloudy nights, resulting in fairly high minimum temperatures.

SUNSHINE. The number of hours of bright sunshine either approached closely or exceeded the normal figures. Both Auckland and Blenheim averaged some two hours a day above normal, but Napier headed the list with its 291 hours.

Pressure Systems. On the 1st, pressure was high to the east, and several disturbances crossing the Dominion kept the weather rather unsettled, with rain chiefly in the coastal provinces. The situation soon developed into the westerly type with a predominance of fair to fine weather, but by the 6th the centre of high pressure had moved eastwards off New Zealand. With an advancing trough, disturbances brought a southerly change, and rain developed in the south and west and became fairly general, but the weather continued stormy for some time.

Notes on the Weather for December, 1939.

By the 18th the improvements had become general and temperatures were mild again. While pressure in the north was high, a series of weak disturbances passed over the south giving rain on the 14th to the west coast and resulting in a weak southerly change with some showers on the 18th.
A disturbance crossed the Auckland Province on the 16th and caused wet weather, and there were some heavy downpours in the Poverty Bay - East Cape area.

After the 17th pressure persisted high in the north and fine weather prevailed with no appreciable rain till the 23rd, when a westerly depression resulted in rain in the south and west. Thereafter heavy showers advanced up the east coast of the South Island, and during the 26th and 27th heavy rain fell in central provinces, with torrential falls along the southern edge of the North Island.

By the 28th an advancing anticyclone took control, so that the year closed with warm and settled weather.
