Order under the Shipping Control Emergency Regulations 1939.

Pursuant to the Shipping Control Emergency Regulations 1939 the Naval Board hereby gives notification as follows:

1. This order may be cited as the Shipping Control Radio Equipment Order 1942.
2. This order shall take effect on the day following the date of publication hereof in the Gazette.
3. In this order—
   (a) A reference to a type of wave is a reference to the type of radio-electric emission so named and defined in Regulation 39 of the Radio Regulations 1932:
   (b) "Authorized officer" has the same meaning as in the Shipping Radio Emergency Regulations 1941.
4. This order shall apply to all ships subject to the Shipping Control Emergency Regulations 1939 to which the Shipping Radio Emergency Regulations 1941 apply.
5. The master of every ship to which this order applies is responsible for compliance with the part of this order on board whether members of the crew or passengers.
6. Every such ship shall, in addition to the main aerial forming part of its radio-transmitting installation, be fitted with an auxiliary aerial for emergency use which shall be erected in a different plane from that of the main aerial.
When the ship is at sea both main and auxiliary aerials shall be capable of bringing in the main radio transmitter by means of a switch or link. A spare length of aerial wire shall be carried on board for use in case the main and auxiliary aerials are destroyed or otherwise rendered useless.

7. On every ship there shall be provided and maintained radio-receiving apparatus as herein specified:

(i) A wireless receiver capable of receiving waves of Types A1, A2, and B on frequencies from 6,000 kilocycles per second to 20,000 kilocycles per second;

(ii) Of the apparatus specified in paragraph (i) and (ii) of this clause.

(iii) One broadcast radio-receiving set with such loud-speaker extensions as may be desired for the use of members of the crew and passengers; or

(iv) As many sets as are required to be fitted in lifeboats or specifically provided for use in lifeboats as there are lifeboats on the ship;

(v) One broadcast radio-receiving set with such loud-speaker extensions as may be desired for the use of members of the crew in the master's cabin;

(vi) One radio-telephony apparatus;

(vii) One radio-receiving set for use in emergency; or

(viii) A radio-receiving set installed in the master's cabin.

8. On any ship there may, in addition to the apparatus herebefore referred to, be carried the following radio-receiving apparatus, namely:

(i) One set of direction-finding apparatus;

(ii) One set of auto-alarm apparatus;

(iii) One set of radio-telephony apparatus;

(iv) One echometer sounding apparatus;

(v) One radio-receiving set for use in emergency;

(vi) As many sets as are required to be fitted in lifeboats or specifically provided for use in lifeboats as there are lifeboats on the ship;

(vii) One broadcast radio-receiving set with such loud-speaker extensions as may be desired for the use of members of the crew and passengers;

(viii) If the apparatus described in the last preceding paragraph (vii) of this clause be not carried then one broadcast radio-receiving set installed in such mess-room or recreation-room provided for the use of members of the crew and one broadcast radio-receiving set installed for each class of passenger carried.

Provided, first, that the total number of receiving-sets authorized by this paragraph on any ship shall not exceed twelve in number;

Provided, secondly, that no extension loud-speaker shall be used with any apparatus installed under the authority of this paragraph.

(ix) A radio-receiving set installed in the master's cabin.

9. No radio-receiving apparatus shall be installed or used on any ship except such apparatus as is required or permitted by this order, and no other radio-receiving apparatus, whether the property of the shipowner or crew or passengers or of any other person, shall be carried on any ship except as cargo or over except under seal and in the custody of the master.

10. No radio-receiving apparatus shall be installed or used on any ship without the personal approval of the master.

11. Every broadcast radio-receiving set shall be held in a position approved by an authorized officer, and shall be secured so that it cannot be removed by any unauthorized person.

12. The electrical energy actually used by any broadcast radio-receiving set installed under the authority of paragraph (vii) or paragraph (viii) of clause 8 hereof shall be capable of being locked, and the key of every such lock shall be retained in the custody or under the direct control of the master.

13. No aerial shall be used in connection with any broadcast radio-receiving set installed under the authority of paragraph (vii), paragraph (viii), or paragraph (ix) of clause 8 hereof:

(i) If any part of such aerial is within 50 ft. in any direction of the aircrafs of a direction-finder; or

(ii) If the aerial is liable to set up electrical interference with any other of the ship's radio installations.

Provided that this clause shall not apply to an apparatus fitted in a permanent manner the position and character of which have been approved by an authorized officer.

14. The radiation from any radio-receiving apparatus when attached to aerials capable of bringing in on any of the frequencies for which the apparatus is capable of being used shall not exceed one-tenth of a microvolt per metre when measured at a distance of one nautical mile.

Provided that apparatus installed prior to the coming into force of this order and not complying with the requirements of this clause may continue to be used until the last reasonable opportunity exists of replacing it or bringing it into compliance herewith.

15. The master of the ship shall take steps to ensure that the degree of radiation from all radio-receiving apparatus of the ship is frequently checked by the senior radio officer and shall carry adequate testing equipment for this purpose.

16. The Naval Board or an authorized officer may by notice in writing exempt any ship or the master thereof from any of the requirements of this order, and any such exemption may relate to the period of any one or more voyages or a part or parts of the same voyage, and be granted subject to such conditions as the Naval Board or authorized officer thinks fit to impose and may at any time be revoked by notice given by the Naval Board or an authorized officer to the master for the time being of the ship in respect of which the exemption was granted.

17. Nothing in this Order shall authorize the use of any radio-receiving apparatus in respect of which a license is required by any Act or regulations if such license has not been obtained or is not in force, and nothing in any such license shall authorize the use of radio-transmitting apparatus or radio-receiving apparatus in breach of this Order.

Dated at Wellington, this 2oth day of February, 1942.

By authority of the Naval Board—

N. H. BEALL, Naval Secretary.
