It will assist and facilitate consideration of applications for licenses if, in respect of those items for which there is no basic allocation or where amounts in excess of the basic allocation are applied for, applicants furnish with their applications information as to (a) the balances remaining on licenses already held for the particular commodity (i.e., the difference between the amounts of the licenses and the amounts represented by imports made and entered under such licenses), and (b) the date and value of unfulfilled orders placed under such licenses.

In those cases where it is known that goods are unprocurable it is urged upon importers to refrain from applying for licenses. This is particularly desired in order that there should be no overstatement of the total amount of licenses for which it is necessary to provide overseas funds. The fact that licenses are not applied for will not prejudice importers in respect of allocations which might be granted in later periods.

Sixth Period licenses have been extended until 30th June, 1943, and they will be valid for imports up to that date.
