No person shall erect or re-erect or recondition any building or make any structural alteration or addition to any building heretofore or hereafter erected, or remove any building from one place to another within the borough or from a place outside the borough to any place within the borough, without first obtaining a building permit from the Borough Council concerned.

No person shall cause or permit any building to be so erected, re-erected, reconditioned, altered, or removed if a building permit in that behalf has not first been obtained from the Council.

The Councils and the examining officers thereof will be guided in their decisions by the lessons learned from recent earthquakes and the accepted principles of design and construction to resist earthquake shocks.

The guiding principles in the design and construction of buildings to resist earthquake shocks are set out by the New Zealand Standard Model Building By-law (N.Z.S.S. No. 95—1936) and by the several parts of the New Zealand Standard Code of Building By-laws (N.Z.S.S. Permits may be granted for the erection and maintenance of temporary structures and for the execution of temporary repairs, although they do not comply in respect of materials, design, and construction, with the by-laws from time to time in operation. Such permits shall not be issued for a longer period than the duration of the present war and one year thereafter. On the expiration of the period of such permits for temporary structures, owners shall be liable, at their own expense, to demolish and remove the temporary structures when required to do so by the local authority concerned. The period of permits issued for temporary repairs shall be subject to yearly review, and may be terminated at any time if deemed desirable by the local authority concerned. On the expiration of the period of such permits for temporary repairs, or at an earlier date if deemed desirable by the local authorities concerned, the owners shall be liable, at their own expense, to comply entirely with clause 1 of this Schedule when required to do so by the local authority concerned.
