NOTES ON THE WEATHER DURING JULY, 1942.

Government Meteorological Observatory.

MEOROMLOGICAL Observations at Kelburn, Wellington, for the Month of July, 1942. Observations taken at 9 a.m.

Mean earth temperature at 1 ft., 46·2°; and at 2 ft., 45·9°. Mean dew-point at 9 a.m. was 43·4°, and mean vapour pressure 9·5 mb.

Means \( > \)ere above normal by slight amounts in the South Island but by 2° F. in eastern districts of the North Island. The figures Were poorer, there being a marked lack of sunshine in Taranaki, Wellington, and Nelson.

Bunshine.-While the duration of bright sunshine was better than average in the southern half of the South Island, elsewhe,·e it was poorer, there being a marked lack of sunshine in Taranaki, Wellington, and Nelson.

General Notes.--June was the least sunny July since 1917. Mean dew-point at 9 a.m. was 43·4°, and mean vapour pressure 9·5 mb.

For the first two days a depression moved south-eastward over the North Island, causing strong westerly winds and considerable rain. Autumn-sown wheat is reported to be making good growth.

Rainfall.—Rains were well spread over the month and totals were, in most cases, above average. The drier areas comprised the Hauraki Plains, southern Hawke's Bay, and the plains south of Christchurch. The greatest rainfall surpluses occurred in southern Taranaki, Wellington, Marlborough, and the ranges of South Nelson. The continuous rains of the 13th and 14th caused flooding in the Manawatu, Wairarapa, West Coast, and Marlborough.

Temperature variances were comparatively mild during the early part of the month, but were much colder to the close. The means were above normal by slight amounts in the South Island but by 2° F. in eastern districts of the North Island. The chief periods of snowfall were centred at the 14th and 30th. Frosts were severe in some localities, but were less intensive and widespread than usual.

Clouds and Weather were often overcast with patchy patches of bright sunshine. The cold spell towards the end of the month, however, gave a temporary check to pastures.

Conditions deteriorated on the 18th, when a deep depression from the South Tasman Sea caused heavy rain on the west coast.

Gales were experienced in the north and south-easterly about Cook Strait. In central New Zealand rain fell steadily and gave rise to flooding, which was severest in the Manawatu region.

On the 10th a cold front began its passage over the country, the following equally south-westerlies bringing snow to some low levels in the South Island and considerable coatings to the northern ranges. Showers became less frequent during the 15th and skis cleared, making widespread sharp frosts possible.

On the 16th, when a deep depression from the South Tasman Sea caused heavy rain on the west coast south of New Plymouth. A weak anticyclone brought a rapid but brief improvement. As a result of complex disturbances in the next low-pressure trough rain fell at times in western and central districts on the 21st and 22nd. On the following two days an active cold front moved from Auckland Province. With north to close to the eastern coast of Auckland Province. With north to close to the eastern coast of Auckland Province. With north to close to the eastern coast of Auckland Province.
