Note: At stations where departures from normal are in parentheses the record has been maintained for 10 or more years in the case of temperature and for less than two years in the case of rainfall and the normals are partly interpolated.
I find following a poor August it has proved most severe for young stock. Lambing losses will be very high. The lack of sunshine has been detrimental to growth, which though appreciable in places, is rank. Water-logged ground has been unsuitable for tillage and spring sowings have been prevented. On the whole the season has been very backward.

Rainfall.—With minor exceptions rain has been heavy and frequent, and few wetter Septembers have been experienced in New Zealand. The most marked surpluses occurred between Oamaru and East Cape, where nearly every place exceeded double the average fall and in not a few instances trebled the average. Amongst those places receiving over 10 in. may be mentioned the southern Wairarapa, Hutt Valley (the wettest month for several decades), Motuaka, parts of Marlborough, and North Canterbury. In the far south totals rapidly decreased, and in Stewart Island only about half the usual rain fell.

Temperatures.—Mean temperatures were about normal over the North Island and Nelson Province, but over the remainder of the country were cooler than usual, depressions increasing in Canterbury and Otago to 2° or more.

Squeak.—For most of the country it was a very dull month with sunshine totals far below normal. Many new low records were established throughout Canterbury, in Nelson, and Waengarui. At Invercargill, however, there was a slight surplus, and from Auckland City northwards there was an excess of about one hour per day.

Weather Sequence.—At first, with a high pressure belt over the northern Tasman Sea, moderate westerlies prevailed with mostly fine weather until a change to cold southerlies advancing on the 2nd brought showers. A depression moving south from Kermadec Islands deepened and a high pressure system advanced over the southern Tasman Sea, so that south to south-east winds became equally as many with gales on the 4th when snow fell in the high country of the North Island and considerable rain occurred between Waipu and East Cape, falls being unusually heavy in the Hutt Valley. Conditions improved rapidly in Nelson, Westland, and Southland.

On the 6th and 7th a trough was passing north-eastward over New Zealand and later a centre developed off East Cape, while another anticyclone in the south moved east of New Zealand. Southerly winds became strong again, especially about Cook Strait, and widespread rain fell in eastern and central districts. On the 9th and 10th, with an extensive shallow depression over the centre of the country and an intense anticyclone to the south-east, easterly winds continued to give periods of rain, mainly on the windward coasts. Except for rain near Invercargill conditions were more generally fair on the 11th and 12th.

Ahead of a trough crossing New Zealand on the 13th and 14th northerly or north-westerly gales were experienced with rain in many places. After a change of wind to the west it improved in eastern districts, but considerable rain fell in Westland. A deepening depression moving southward on the 16th from near Lord Howe Island gave widespread unsettled conditions with north-easterly, and later north-westerly, gales in parts of the North Island. Deep centres were off Greymouth and Canterbury on the 17th, strong westerly winds with passing showers and some thunder prevailing to the north, and fresh southerlies to the south-east with drizzle and rain. This depression moved eastward on the 18th while another was forming in the north-western Tasman. The new depression was off Karamea on the 22nd, and was followed by yet another from the central Tasman. The last was extremely deep when it crossed Taranaki on the 24th and westerlies became strong._ The weather continued unsettled generally and temperatures became colder until an anticyclone over New Zealand was an abnormal month with persisted unsettled conditions. Many well-developed cyclonic depressions passed the first, with a high pressure belt over the northern Tasman Sea, moderate westerlies prevailed with mostly fine weather until a change to cold southerlies advancing on the 2nd brought showers. A depression moving south from Kermadec Islands deepened and a high pressure system advanced over the southern Tasman Sea, so that south to south-east winds became equally as many with gales on the 4th when snow fell in the high country of the North Island and considerable rain occurred between Waipu and East Cape, falls being unusually heavy in the Hutt Valley.
