Note.—At stations where departures from normal are in parentheses the record has been maintained for less than ten years in the case of temperatures and for less than twenty years in the case of rainfall and the normals are partly interpolated.

Records of Sunshine.—Except near Hawke's Bay, most places experienced more than the normal duration of bright sunshine. Large exceedances were recorded in Auckland, Taranaki, and Canterbury provinces. Auckland City and Timaru being outstanding in this respect.

Weather Sequence.—An anticyclone was over northern New Zealand on the 1st, but on the following two days a cold front crossed the country with a rapid rise of pressure behind, causing strong southerly winds in central and eastern districts. Showers were very isolated, being heavy, however, in a few parts of Canterbury, and temperatures became much cooler. By the 4th conditions had improved, the new anticyclone being over the North Island.

There was scattered rain in Southland and Otago on the 5th, with a low-pressure trough which soon became very weak as an anticyclone moved south from the South and Chatham Islands. Elsewhere it was fair and warm, and conditions became sultry generally on the 6th.

A cold front reaching Southland on the 7th moved off the North Island on the 9th; ahead, north-westerlies became strong in central districts, bringing rain to the West Coast, and elsewhere conditions were mostly dry. A more rapid cold front crossed the country late on the 9th and a depression formed and deepened near Chatham Island, while an anticyclone remained to the south of New Zealand. In the west the weather was fine and mild but it was colder in eastern districts, with strong southerlies at times and a few showers occurred. Winds moderated generally on the 12th.

A shallow depression advancing from the west on the 13th gave rather cloudy conditions with some local rain, notably near Kaipara and towards East Cape, where some thunderstorms occurred. An anticyclone from the Tasman Sea was over New Zealand on the 15th, and the weather was more generally fair. On the 16th there was rain in Westland and Southland associated with a cold front on which a secondary depression developed and moved to the south of Southland. North-westerly winds became strong in central and southern districts, and the heavy precipitation experienced in and west of the southern ranges caused some slips. Occasional rain extended to Taranaki, where the trough of the depression became stationary on the 18th, but this moved off the North Island on the 20th, a cyclone being then near Kermadec Islands. Southwesterlies became strong in central districts and rain became fairly general over the North Island and also north of Banks Peninsula, while south-westerly winds were gusty over the South Island.

On the 21st, thunderstorms were of gale force about Cook Strait and South Taranaki, while it remained fine in Westland, Otago, and Southland. On the 21st, southerlies were of gale force about Cook Strait and South Taranaki, while it remained fine in Westland, Otago, and Southland. On the 31st an anticyclone covered most of New Zealand.
