Notes on the Weather for August, 1944

General.—August had no very severe weather, and there was less wind and more cloud than usual in most districts. It has completed what has been a fairly easy winter for stock, which are in very good condition. Lambing has commenced with favourable weather, but some small losses resulted from the west southerly in the Wairarapa on the 19th and from the rain at the close of the month on parts of the Marlborough coast. Cultivation in some places has been prevented by the wetness of the ground and the absence of drying winds. Rainfall.—The month's totals showed many variations. The more complicuous excesses occurred in Nelson and Marlborough, between Tauranga and Napier, and locally near Wellington City, and Balclutha. There was some minor flooding near Napier on the 20th. The drier areas included Patea, Wanganui, Timaru, Oamaru, and the Province of Westland.

Temperature.—Departures of mean temperature values from normal were not very significant. Values were slightly below normal in the north-west and far south of the North Island, also in Marlborough, and rather more so about Christchurch and mid-Canterbury. Elsewhere temperatures were milder than usual, the highest departures occurring at Gisborne. Most places experienced a few sharp frosts. Sunshine.—While in Westland and to the east of the North Island ranges sunshine was above normal, totals were deficient elsewhere. At Wanganui and Wellington the values were more than one hour per day below normal. Siborne had the highest total of 1959 hours.

Weather Sequence.—After a depression moved east of Southland a cold front advanced on the 2nd and 3rd, bringing a change from strong north-westerlies to moderate southerlies. At first there was extensive rain in Westland, Otago, and Southland, but further north the amounts were smaller, except near the path of a depression which moved along the front across South Auckland and later deepened as it moved moved towards Chatham Islands. Conditions gradually improved from the south and west.
