Section 7: means registration under section 7 of the 1944 amendment which applies to engineers who, within the twelve years prior to the passing of the amendment, had completed a period of professional training, or who have been engaged for not less than five years in the practice of engineering.

The entry also gives the class of engineering in which the Board has accepted the engineer's training and experience as a qualification for registration.

For the three main classes of Civil, Electrical, and Mechanical engineering, and those include any other class which is either specialized or restricted.

It is also to be noted that corporate membership of one of the recognized British Engineering Institutions entitles the holder to be styled as a "Chartered Engineer," but this information is omitted from the list.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR APRIL, 1945

General.—A very strong persistence of westerly or south-westerly conditions, especially after the 13th April, determined the characteristics of the month. The weather generally was very changeable and rather cool. Showery periods occurred with greatest frequency in Westland and Southland, while eastern and southern districts had extended periods of fine weather, and at Tokomaru Bay two or three days experienced rain. Winds were very strong. The continued absence of good autumn rains east of the North Island ranges is causing concern regarding winter feed, and the situation in the Gisborne district has become very serious. In other parts of the country the feed supply is satisfactory, and the outlook for the whole is in good condition to face the coming winter. As in the preceding month conditions were adverse for harvesting in Southland.

Rainfall.—All districts exposed to the west or south-west from Stewart Island north to Manukau Harbour, as well as most of Otago, had surplus rain, the percentage excess being greatest about New Plymouth, in Southland, and eastern Otago. Other districts had deficiencies. Between Hastings and East Cape most totals were rather less than a quarter of the normal for this month. Near Russell, Whakatane, Masterton, eastern Marlborough, and Timaru the amount of rain was of the order of half the normal or less.

Temperatures.—In most cases the mean temperature was below normal, but by insignificant amounts in eastern districts from Timaru northward. South of New Plymouth on the west coasts departures were about 1°F. There were frosts on several occasions, those on the 27th being particularly sharp and widespread.

SUNSHINE.—Westport, Westland, and Southland received much less sunshine than usual. South Canterbury, Marlborough, and the eastern coast of the North Island had more than normal, but Gisborne was the only place with a large excess.

Weather Sequence.—On the 11th an anticyclone was giving settled weather over the North Island, but a frontal zone was causing some rain in southern districts. This was followed by an anticyclone passing eastward. By the 3rd pressure had become very high to the east and, with the slow approach of a trough, fresh northerlies brought occasional rain, heaviest in Westland. Southern districts experienced a clearance on the 4th and 5th. Rain, however, had been heavy in many western districts earlier on the 5th, and showers continued after a depression passed south-eastward over the South Island. The original trough then moved to the north-east of the North Island, while with an active trough approaching, northerlies increased and rain spread from the far south-west. Late on the 10th falls were heavy in Westland and on the 11th Taranaki had heavy rain, but amounts were more moderate over Auckland the next day. Very little fell in eastern districts.

With a cold front moving north-eastward over the whole country during the 13th and early 14th westerlies winds turned temporarily more to the south-west, and most districts had some showers. A similar front passed late on the 15th and 16th. Pressure continued high over the northern Tasman Sea, and the next front crossing Southland on the 17th weakened before it reached the North Island the next day. The anticyclone over the Tasman became more extensive, and fairly settled weather prevailed. A weak front in the south-westerly and Southland, while eastern and northern districts had extended bright intervals and at Tokomaru Bay only two days experienced rain.

A series of troughs associated with a very low-pressure system to the far south affected the country. The first reached south-western New Zealand early on the 24th, and gave heavy rain west of the Alps and moderate amounts elsewhere in the west. This was followed eighteen hours later by another, which gave a brief change of winds to the south-west and a few showers. South-westerlies strengthened considerably on the 28th, and were accompanied by equaly showers including scattered thunder and hail. Showers persisted most in Westland and Southland and eastern Otago, but wind and showers decreased gradually (the 27th being a frosty morning in many places) and on the 28th it became fair generally. A cold front on the 29th gave showers, again chiefly in western and southern districts, and these became very isolated on the 30th.
