NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR MARCH, 1948

General.—March was a warm, sunny, and rather windy month. It was the fifth successive dry month in the Rangitikei-Manawatu and Wairarapa districts, where lack of food and feed for stock is causing serious concern. Over much of Canterbury, too, there is likely to be a serious shortage of winter feed. Timely rains in the middle of the month relieved the situation in Hawke’s Bay and Gisborne, but in South Auckland the flush of growth which followed caused an outbreak of facial eczema, where precautions were not taken to keep stock off the new grass.

Rainfall.—In the eastern part of the Coromandel Peninsula the rainfall was over twice the average amount, 7-30 in. being recorded at Tauranga on the 13th. Totals were slightly above normal about and north of Auckland City, near New Plymouth, from Gisborne to East Cape, on the West Coast, and in Otago (excluding South Otago). Over the greater part of the country the rainfall was below normal, the highest deficiencies occurring in North Canterbury, Banks Peninsula, and North Wairarapa. In the latter area the total rainfall since the beginning of last November has been less than for any other period of five consecutive months since records commenced fifty years ago. Thunderstorms were widespread in Otago and Southland on the 7th, 8th, 9th, and 29th.

Temperatures.—In the North Island, mean temperatures were two to three degrees above average. On the West Coast they differed little from the average, but over the remainder of the South Island departures were also positive and of the order of one to two degrees. The mean temperature was slightly below the average in western and northern portions of the North Island; other districts had a surplus, which was greatest to the east of the main ranges. Timaru had the equivalent of almost two hours a day more sunshine than the average for March.

Weather Sequence.—Temperatures were high at the beginning of the month, as an anticyclone moved off to the east. A cold front associated with a deep depression in the south brought brief rain to western districts. Backing westerly winds were strong for a time in the South Island, but soon decreased with the arrival of an anticyclone from the Tasman Sea.

On the 5th a shallow depression moved slowly past Southland. Its cold front, like its predecessor, failed to carry rain to districts east of North Island’s ranges, but produced some heavy thunderstorms in Otago.

Widespread but, due to the rapid movement of the storm, was of relatively short duration. The rains failed to reach Hawke’s Bay or the Wairarapa.

On the 26th north-westerlies remained strong south of Taranaki, and frequent heavy showers with occasional thunder continued on the West Coast, the weather having cleared elsewhere. Next morning widespread fogs were reported from the Auckland Province, while cool southerlies were advancing northwards on to the North Island as an anticyclone extended on to Otago from the west. With the slow development of a depression in the north, south-easterly winds became strong over much of the North Island, and rain spread over the Auckland Province. Some heavy falls were reported near Auckland City on the 31st.
