Summary of the Records of Temperature, Rainfall, and Sunshine for December, 1950—continued

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR DECEMBER, 1950

General.—Windy westerly conditions for the first half of the month were followed by a week of fine summer weather. The cool wet weather of the last quarter came as a big disappointment to thousands of holiday makers. On the whole the month was very favourable for farming. However, parts of bay are being harvested but some difficulty has been experienced in picking fruit which ripened towards the end of the month. Stock is reported to be in excellent condition.

Rainfall.—Rainfall was somewhat deficient in Otago and Southland (except the western parts), and also in Hawke’s Bay and Auckland. Elsewhere totals were above average, though generally by small amounts. A few districts had double the normal rainfall, including the southern tip of the North Island, the northern Sounds of Marlborough, and scattered parts of Taranaki.

It is worth noting that the rainfall distribution was almost the reverse of the previous month’s, in that those districts with excess rain in November experienced a drier December than usual, and vice versa.

Temperature.—Mean temperatures were slightly below average in the southern half of the South Island, chiefly due to a cold spell towards the end of the month. Elsewhere it was warmer than usual especially in the area from National Park to the Bay of Plenty when the departure was about 3°F.

One or two light frosts were recorded in the south and in elevated inland districts of the North Island towards the end of the month.

Sunshine.—North of Cook Strait the duration of bright sunshine was close to the average except in the Hawke’s Bay district, where the region was more than the average for December.

The largest surplus was experienced in Dunedin, but a deficiency was shown in central parts of the South Island.

THE GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY IN NEW ZEALAND

A survey of social security in New Zealand from 1888 to 1949, and the most comprehensive work on the subject yet published in this country.

Of 180 pages, the book is divided into three parts—cash benefits, health benefits, and finance. Each subject is dealt with in detail and there is a comprehensive index.

The book will undoubtedly be of considerable interest to those interested in social security and social services, and will be especially valuable to University students.
