

south of Taranaki and Hawke's Bay, and western districts received further periods of heavy rain. During the 23rd a cold front associated with the last depression of the series moved rapidly north-eastwards over the Dominion accompanied by gales, heavy rain, and a very sharp drop in temperature. There was a substantial fall of snow on the high country, and on the Canterbury Plains too, it lay to a depth of a few inches for a brief period.

Cold showery south-westerly weather predominated for the next two days, and hail was reported from many districts but, with the approach of an intense anticyclone from the Tasman Sea, the weather cleared rapidly from the south and west on the 25th. Severe frosts were recorded in many inland districts during that night. The anticyclone over the Tasman Sea was retarded temporarily by the development of a cyclonic disturbance far to the north-east. Depressions were also very active in the sub-Antarctic regions and the troughs associated with two of these crossed the Dominion. The first was weak and caused brief rain in Westland on the 27th. The second was more active and brought a brief period of rain to most districts, finally moving off to the north-east on the afternoon of the 29th. Next day there was a general improvement as the anticyclone slowly enveloped the country.
