Notes—At stations where departures from normal are in parentheses, the temperature record has been maintained for less than ten years, the rainfall record for less than twenty years. Rainfall normals have been revised and now refer to the standard period 1921–50. Where observations are not available for the whole period, or where the site of the rain-gauge has been changed, the normals are partly interpolated.

Note on the Weather for October 1933

General.—In the first half of the month the weather was unsettled and cold. Several late frosts again affected Central Otago fruit-growers and there was a heavy fall of snow over the Alps and inland Canterbury. In the latter half of the month the temperatures were generally milder and there were several fine sunny days. Winds were generally lighter than usual, with an absence of strong gales.

Exceptionally large rains were received on the 21st and 22nd afternoon temperatures exceeded 70° F over considerable areas of Canterbury and Otago.

Weather.—Temperatures were close to average over the greater part of the country, except in the first half of the month when they were a little colder than average over the main ranges. As the depression moved away a south-westerly change扫 across the country on the 13th and 14th, bringing general showers and some thunder and hail in parts of the North Island. From Raglan and Central Taranaki came reports of many slips as a result of several days of moderate rain.

Following a clearance over the greater part of the South Island on the 14th, the weather on the three following days was mainly fair over the whole country as an anticyclone moved on to the North Island from the Tasman Sea.

On the 18th and 19th a cold front moved north-eastwards over New Zealand accompanied by a belt of rain. The weather soon cleared with the advance of another anticyclone on the country. Most districts experienced a spell of at least five days, but there was rain on the West Coast on the 23rd, when a deep depression moved in from the south-west caused a temporary freshening of north-westerly winds over the South Island.

Pressure remained comparatively high over the whole country for the last five days of the month, but most of Central Otago districts experienced showery conditions for the greater part of this period, mainly as the result of the passage of a shallow depression to the north. The weather was better in the south, but the West Coast received some rain on the 27th and 31st.
