Notes on the Weather for August 1956

General: For most of the North Island August was the fifth successive month of unsettled weather, and in parts of the Auckland Province the wetness of the ground was adversely affecting the height of the stock. In the South Island conditions were much drier and mainly favourable. In most districts of both Islands the weather proved reasonably good for lambing.

Temperatures: One of the best periods of a fine weather was from the 18th to the 23rd. The temperature record has been maintained for less than ten years, been revised and now refer to the standard period 1921-50. Where rainfall has been changed for the whole period, the normal for the site of the new period has been used.

Sunshine: Sunshine was mainly about normal. Marlborough and most of Southland were favoured with 20 to 30 hours more than usual, while Gisborne fell below normal by the same amount.

Weather Sequences: On the first two days of the month a trough of low pressure moved eastward over the country and a depression formed to the north-west of Northland. Rain affected the North Island and coastal districts of the South Island. As the depression deepened and moved down the east coast on the 3rd and 4th, there was heavy rain over the Auckland Province, with some flooding. At the same time pressure rose in the south, and over the 8th a cold south-easterly airstream covered the North Island. Cold, showery weather prevailed in eastern districts, with snow at times on the high country of the North Island. On the 9th rain extended to most of the Auckland and Taranaki Provinces and snow came down from the mountains, usually in low levels as a small depression moved eastwards across the centre of the North Island.

On the 9th a depression crossed Northland, with further rain over the Auckland Province. For the next four days this depression moved slowly eastward over the country and a depression formed to the north-west of Northland. Rain affected the North Island and coastal districts of the South Island. As the depression deepened and moved down the east coast on the 3rd and 4th, there was heavy rain over the Auckland Province, with some flooding. On the 29th there was rain as far south as Canterbury with the passage of a small depression from Tararanka to Gisborne. On the following day the weather began to clear from the south-west as an anticyclone moved on to the country from the west. For the last two days of the month this anticyclone covered the North Island and fair weather prevailed, apart from some rain at times on the West Coast.
