Sunshine

SUNSHINE: Sunshine totals were very low except in eastern and southern districts of the South Island, where they were close to average. In central and northern districts of the North Island the deficiency amounted to about 24 hours a day, making it one of the cloudiest Decembers on record in that area. New Plymouth, Rotorua, and Taumarunui have not previously recorded such low December sunshine.

Weather Sequence:

For the first few days an active trough of low pressure moved slowly over the South Island causing widespread rain. It became quite weak by the time it reached the North Island on the 4th. Next day there was some further brief rain in the South Island during the passage of a cold front.

After an anticyclone had brought temporary improvement on the 6th, another very active trough accompanied by a broad belt of rain began to pass slowly across the country. A low pressure centre formed within the trough to the west of the North Island on the 8th, though it did not deepen to great extent. It caused widespread prolonged rainfall over most of the North Island for several days.

With the approach of a deep and extensive disturbance across the Tasman Sea a rain again developed over the West Coast on the 10th and later spread for a time to other districts of the South Island. The main centre of this disturbance passed to the south on the 13th but another soon developed over the Cook Strait area and moved slowly southwards to pass off the South Island on the 19th. During this very unsettled period from the 11th to the 19th heavy and persistent rains affected the greater part of the North Island, especially the central plateau. East of the South Island ranges falls were relatively light.

LATE RETURNS

Note—At stations where departures from normal have an asterisk, the temperature record has been maintained for less than ten years, the rainfall record for less than twenty years. Rainfall normals have been revised and now refer to the standard period 1921–50. Where observations are not available for the whole period, or where the site of the rain gauge has been changed, the normals are partly interpolated.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR DECEMBER 1958

General: Warm, unsettled weather predominated throughout December. Over most of the North Island it was very dull and wet, but it was much sunnier in eastern and southern districts of the South Island. In Canterbury more rain than usual was welcomed in order to offset the effects of the very dry spring. It was a good month for dairy production, and cattle were reported in good condition. In some parts of the North Island conditions were not available for the whole period, or where the site of the rain gauge has been changed, the normals are partly interpolated.

Rainfall: It was a very wet month over the North Island (except the Gisborne district) and in Nelson, few places having less than double the normal rainfall. From Taranaki across to Rotorua and Taupo, with rainfall three or four times the average, it was the wettest December on record. The only serious flooding occurred on Christmas Eve, when slips and washouts disrupted road and rail traffic in the centre of the Island.

A north-westerly gale caused some damage in Christchurch and other parts of Canterbury on the 12th.

Sunshine: Sunshine totals were very low except in eastern and southern districts of the South Island, where they were close to average. In central and northern districts of the North Island the deficiency amounted to about 24 hours a day, making it one of the cloudiest Decembers on record in that area. New Plymouth, Rotorua, and Taumarunui have not previously recorded such low December sunshine.

Weather Sequence: For the first few days an active trough of low pressure moved slowly over the South Island causing widespread rain. It became quite weak by the time it reached the North Island on the 4th. Next day there was some further brief rain in the South Island during the passage of a cold front.

After an anticyclone had brought temporary improvement on the 6th, another very active trough accompanied by a broad belt of rain began to pass slowly across the country. A low pressure centre formed within the trough to the west of the North Island on the 8th, though it did not deepen to great extent. It caused widespread prolonged rainfall over most of the North Island for several days.

With the approach of a deep and extensive disturbance across the Tasman Sea a rain again developed over the West Coast on the 10th and later spread for a time to other districts of the South Island. The main centre of this disturbance passed to the south on the 13th but another soon developed over the Cook Strait area and moved slowly southwards to pass off the South Island on the 19th. During this very unsettled period from the 11th to the 19th heavy and persistent rains affected the greater part of the North Island, especially the central plateau. East of the South Island ranges falls were relatively light.
On the 20th a trough which still retained considerable activity lay stationary across Northland and the Bay of Plenty, while a ridge of high pressure brought a temporary clearance to the South Island. With the southward movement of the trough rain became general over the North Island and the northern part of the South Island and continued for several days. A low pressure centre developed and moved across the middle of the North Island giving exceptionally heavy rainfalls there which resulted in considerable disruption to holiday traffic by road and rail on the 24th. A cool southerly change, with rain, advanced over the South Island on the 22nd and 23rd when an anticyclone was centred near Tasmania. The latter moved north-eastwards to pass across Northland on the 27th. The weather improved on the 25th although occasional showers were reported from many parts of the country. Pressures remained relatively high to the north for the rest of the month while a series of depressions passed in the far south bringing rain at times to districts in and west of the main ranges. One of these depressions was centred close to Southland on the morning of the 29th and during the day north-westerly gales were reported about and south of Cook Strait. The associated cold front gave light rain also in western and northern districts of the North Island as it moved north-eastwards, but fair weather then prevailed generally with the approach of an anticyclone from the Tasman Sea.
