NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR APRIL 1962

General: In the North Island April was wet and rather warm, and noteworthy for a violent storm which occurred at mid-month. Throughout both islands farmers found it a favourable month, as moisture was adequate in nearly all districts and there was an absence of severe cold spells. A very deep depression crossed the North Island from the 14th to the 18th, causing exceptionally strong winds in most districts, with widespread damage. The main areas which escaped damage were Nelson, the West Coast, and Southland.

Rainfall: Rainfall was above normal over most of the North Island and also in northern districts of the South Island and the Canterbury Plains and coast. It was more than double the average value about Cook Strait, in the Hokitika — Bay of Islands area of Northland, and also Banks Peninsula. To the north and west of the Bay of Islands totals ranging from 13 to 23 in., were recorded, two-thirds of which fell in the four days 26 to 29 April, with some serious flooding.

About and west of the Southern Alps and in Southland rainfall was less than three-quarters of the average value.

Temperatures: Temperatures were above average by 1 to 2 degrees over the North Island, but they were below average by a degree in eastern districts of the South Island.

The coolest spell was associated with the passage of the deep depression on the 15th, when snow fell on the ranges of both islands.

Sunshine: Sunshine was mainly close to average. However, the West Coast and Hawke's Bay were favoured with about 20 hours more sunshine than usual; while in Northland, Waitarapa, and Central Otago it was below average by a similar amount.
