LATE RETURNS

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR JULY 1964

General: Barometers were very low over New Zealand in July, and there was a high frequency of north-westerly winds. It was an exceptionally cloudy and mild month, and also wetter than usual.

Rainfall: The rainfall was above average by about 50 per cent over the greater part of the country. In Waikato, Taumarunui, and Taupo and also in Manawatu it was more than double the average value.

In Southland and in most eastern districts rainfall was somewhat below average. In Gisborne and northern Hawke's Bay it was less than half.

During the passage of a small depression across the North Island on the 7th daily falls of up to 5 in. were recorded in Bay of Plenty, with some flooding.

Thunderstorms were unusually frequent in the Auckland Province during the next two days it crossed the North Island and moved away south-eastward, while pressures rose in the south. Heavy rain again set in on the West Coast and in the Alps; and some rain later spread to all areas except eastern districts of the South Island, from Invercargill to Kaikoura, and Gisborne. Considerable falls were also recorded in Waitomo, Auckland, and Northland. Strong gales caused some damage in Central and West Otago.

On the 7th a small depression formed near Auckland and during the next two days it crossed the North Island and moved away south-eastward, while pressures rose in the south. Heavy rain affected the Bay of Plenty, with flooding; and considerable falls were also reported from Wellington and the Kaikoura coast. Some rain also fell in other areas, apart from the West Coast and most of Otago and Southland. On the 10th south-westerly winds prevailed, with showers in Northland, Auckland, and North Taranski. A weak ridge of high pressure brought fair weather on the 11th.

The period from the 12th to the 22nd was one of persistent north-westerly winds, with dull unsettled conditions in western and northern districts of the South Island and over most of the North Island, but somewhat better weather in eastern districts from eastern Southland to Gisborne. At first a very deep depression to the south of Tasmania moved slowly eastward. A secondary depression developed just west of Cook Strait and crossed the country during the 15th, with rain extending into Canterbury (P.O. Box 1721), Christchurch; corner of Water and Bond Streets (P.O. Box 1104), Dunedin. Prices for quantities supplied on application. Copies may be ordered by quoting serial number.
