The Indecent Publications Act 1963

DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

The tribunal has considered the application made on behalf of The New English Library Ltd. in respect of a paperback edition of The Carpetbaggers by Harold Robbins with the consent of the Minister of Justice—for a decision in respect of the above-named book—whether it is indecent or not, or alternatively a decision as to its classification.

Brief submissions were offered by counsel for the applicant in support of the application. Counsel for the Secretary for Justice made no submissions.

The book is a paperback edition. It is a long story prolix to the point of tediousness. There is no glorification of sex or of any other behaviour but we do not consider the narrative is such as to deprave a reader or to be injurious to the public good. We do not think there is any warrant for submission.

We determine accordingly that the book is not indecent within the meaning of the Statute.

K. M. GRESSON, Chairman.

7 April 1965.

The Indecent Publications Act 1963

DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

The tribunal has considered an application made on behalf of Penguin Books Ltd.—with the consent of the Minister of Justice—for a decision in respect of a paperback edition of Lady Chatterley's Lover—whether it is indecent or not, or for a decision as to its classification.

Two applications were made regarding this book—one in respect of a hard-back edition published by William Heineman Ltd., which has a preface by the author, the retail price of which in New Zealand is 16s. and the other in respect of a paperback edition published by Penguin Books Ltd., which has an introduction by Richard Hoggart and which is intended to retail in New Zealand at $5. The application for submission of the hard-back edition to the tribunal was refused by the Minister who however consented to the paperback edition being so submitted, which accordingly has been done.

The hard-back edition has been put into general circulation in New Zealand and indeed is prominently displayed in many book shops.

Our function is to consider and to classify the paperback edition, but it is in our opinion a relevant consideration that the hard-back edition is on unrestricted sale in New Zealand. The text of the story in both editions is the same. There is no difference between the two editions save in regard to the face of the one and the introduction of the other and the form of each respectively.

We had lengthy submissions from counsel for the applicant and for the Secretary for Justice respectively. The general tenor of the argument was that the book was a serious well written story and though it contained sexual episodes described very realistically there was no glorification of sex, nor any or other form of indecency. It was submitted that the book was not one which would tend to deprave a reader or to be injurious to the public good. It was said that the paperback edition was a completion in that form of all Lawrence's works; and that it had been on sale for four years in many book shops.

The submissions of counsel were well presented and not lacking in cogency. Both invoked the provisions of the Statute and we have given a good deal of thought to the matter.
The book that is a seriously written work by an author who was of high literary eminence and whose works have been much discussed; and it has been the subject of judicial consideration under the New Zealand Statute is whether the book 'Lady Chatterley's Lover' is unsuitable reading for juveniles; that the book is indecent or obscene; but in each case the question had to be determined upon the basis that the function of the tribunal is to provide an undue exploitation of sex. Though the story is in the main concerned with the sexual relations of Lady Chatterley and her lover Mellors in pursuance of the author's doctrine of fulfilment of natural instincts and urges. It is a trite observation that since it would be difficult to ensure such a restriction being made, this is a clear instance to invoke the provisions of the Statute; the finding of the majority that because the Minister of Justice refused to allow the hard-back edition to be submitted to the tribunal it would therefore be futile to impose a restriction on the Penguin edition; they regard as a policy of expedience rather than principle.

In other jurisdictions where the book has been considered judicially there has been a great difference of opinion as to whether the book is an undue exploitation of sex or whether it is indecent, or indecent unless circulation is restricted to specified persons or classes of persons, or whether used for a particular purpose. It is beyond question that the book contains accounts of several acts of sexual behaviour described in language which is exceedingly frank and to some readers must be repellent. Nevertheless these very realistic descriptions of the relations between man and woman are, in our opinion, an undue exploitation of sex. Though the story is in the main concerned with the sexual relations of Lady Chatterley and her lover Mellors - there is no perversion depicted, merely that the union of these two persons was the fulfilment of natural instincts and urges. It is a trite observation that the task of the tribunal must be to consider the book as a whole - not whether particular words or passages are indecent. The tribunal has previously held, and holds, that indecency is not to be found in words as such, but in their use in indecent contexts or for indecent purposes. The novel is a complex piece of writing which is not without literary merit. It certainly displays sufficient skill on the author's part to justify its being regarded as a work of art. Its main theme is the development of the relationship between Lady Chatterley and her lover Mellors in pursuance of the author's doctrine of sex and love. It deals as well with the effect of industrialisation and class barriers in England against which Lawrence opposes his ideal conception of love.

In other jurisdictions where the book has been considered judicially there has been a great difference of opinion as to whether the book is an undue exploitation of sex or whether it offends against community standards. The dominant consideration under the New Zealand Statute is whether the book deals with matters of sex (inter alia) in a manner which is "injurious to the public good". We have accordingly addressed ourselves in particular to this aspect.

Our conclusion is that though the author has described in great detail sexual behaviour in language which would be offensive to many nevertheless the passages are but an integral part of his general theme. The author has been held by persons having literary qualifications to be entitled to regard as an outstanding contributor to English literature and we can find no sufficient indication that any significant number of persons would be depraved or corrupted by reading this book. There is however a more difficult question. Under the Statute we are required to consider as counsel for the Secretary for Justice urged - whether the book is indecent in the hands of persons under - it was suggested - 18 years of age, and that since it would be difficult to ensure such a restriction effective there should be a general ban on the paperback edition having regard to its form and proposed price of $5. We have no hesitation in holding the book unsuitable for juveniles, not so much because of the language in which the sexual episodes are described as because, in our opinion, mentally immature minors would be incapable of appreciating the theme of the story and the purpose of the writer. As to how the book should be classified there is a difference of opinion upon the principle.

The majority view must of course govern the decision which is that the tribunal hold the office of paperback edition of 'Lady Chatterley's Lover' published by Penguin Books is not indecent within the meaning of the Indecent Publications Act 1963.
