

Plenty, and Wairarapa. For the next 3 days an anticyclone was centred to the east of the South Island, while a trough of low pressure advanced slowly eastward across the South Tasman Sea. The weather was settled over most of the country, but freshening northerlies brought some rain to Fiordland and South Westland.

From the 19th to the 23rd the trough of low pressure moved slowly northward over the country accompanied by scattered rain, which was mainly light, except on the West Coast and parts of Taupo and Bay of Plenty. During the next 2 days an anticyclone was centred east of the South Island and the weather was generally fine.

From the 26th to the 28th a trough of low pressure was stationary over Southland bringing rain there, and also light falls on both coasts of the South Island further north. This trough of low pressure finally crossed the rest of the country during the last 3 days of the month, accompanied by scattered rain, mainly light.
