Decision of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

No. 240—249

In the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963, and in the matter of an application by Murdoch Riley, the publisher, for decisions in respect of the following books:

*The Coming of a God, The Daughter of Fanny Hill, Vol. II,

Decisions of the Tribunal

The application is made by leave of the Minister of Justice. There was no appearance of the applicant. In respect of each book, the Tribunal decides as follows:

*The Coming of a God, by Jerry Fornarow; published by Holloway House, Los Angeles.
Nothing in this ill-written book has sufficient artistic or social purpose to offset the effect of its numerous passages of violence and indecency.

The Tribunal accordingly classifies it as indecent.

*The Daughter of Fanny Hill, Vol. II; published by Brandon House, California.

Volume I of this book was considered by the Tribunal on 28 October 1969 and was declared not to be indecent. The authenticity of this book, which is described as expurgated, remains very uncertain, and that contributes to the Tribunal's decision that as it in some ways and episodes lays a larger and more pervasive emphasis on sexual activities, normal and abnormal, than the first volume, its distribution cannot be considered in the public interest. The Tribunal accordingly classifies it as indecent.

This is one more of too many books about wife-swapping. As usual it is set in an environment of idleness, affluence, and indulgence. Although the author contrived a romantically happy ending between Connie, the likeable partner in the swaps, mostly ungenial, and Dr. Larry Crandall, her husband having been incinerated in a car crash, these considerations do not offset the repetitions and emphasised details of the swaps or of the violence that enters into them. On these, the emphasis falls so heavily that the Tribunal is led to classify this book as indecent in terms of the Act.

The contrived true lovers' ending does not change the character or quality of this super-heated story of a passionate girl's surrender to her early seduction and her willing progress through a life of sexual promiscuity. The episodes of the process are described with a fulsome emphasis on physical detail. The effect, clearly intended, is such as to oblige the Tribunal to classify the book as indecent within the meaning of the Act, for it has no counteracting, artistic, or other merit.

Transvestism, by Hugh Magnus; published by Tandem Books, London.

The Bisexual Woman, by David Lynne; published by Bens Books Ltd., London.

These books follow a now fairly familiar pattern. The theme of each is some form of sex deviation, the method to supply some form of introduction, exposition, or commentary and to illustrate it with what purport to be personal case-histories and it is not denied that the expositions are matter-of-fact and adequately so, on an elementary level. It is however, noticeable that the credentials of the expositors, interviewers, and editors are not fully and explicitly stated, that the case histories occupy most of the space and take most of the emphasis, and that there is a disturbing corres-
This is a novel based on the film world of Hollywood. The picture is revolting. The central character is a girl determined to become a star and to do anything or everything to win this end, sex, drugs, drink, all helped. The companions of her journey are, with hardly an exception, distolte. It comes as no surprise to find her ending as a murderess and providing the solution in a mad car wreck. To say so much is necessary only to explain why the Tribunal, having considered the narrative as a whole, its episodes and their tone and terms, concludes that it is to be classified as indecent within the meaning of the Act.

This novel consists entirely of a series of sexual incidents, which progress in perversion and violence, perpetrated by a husband in revenge against his wife, whom he has discovered in intercourse with a negro. The whole tone of the book is worsened by hatred, personal and racial.

The Tribunal accordingly classifies it as indecent.

Decision of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

No. 250

DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

This novel consists entirely of a series of sexual incidents, which progress in perversion and violence, perpetrated by a husband in revenge against his wife, whom he has discovered in intercourse with a negro.

The revenge consists of the husband seeking out one negro after another for seduction, rape, cruelty, and violence. The whole tone of the book is worsened by hatred, personal and racial.

The Tribunal accordingly classifies it as indecent.

No. 251-253

DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

This book claims to be the transcript of a true confession written about 1905 and a piece of genuine Victorian erotica. The author is not identified nor is the question of his identity opened up in the editorial matter.

The narrative is broken by frequent editorial interpolations which abridge the story and comment on it but without throwing any clear light on Victorian Society, from which it is alleged to emerge. The narrative itself is unquestionably pornographic and must accordingly be considered indecent. And point is lent to that decision by the very real doubts of the authenticity of the narrative.

The Tribunal accordingly classifies it as indecent.

The Encyclopedia of Erotica, by Dr. Paul J. Gillette and Robert H. Dicks; published by Universal Printing and Distributing Corporation, New York.

This is on the face of it a bibliography of erotic or indecent works, it is also an anthology of extracts from major and minor erotica. To take the first description first, it is to be observed that the first desideratum is that it should be complete and accurate. This book is neither. Works that should be listed are not listed. The comment on some considerable works are often inaccurate or insufficient. There are many misprints. Secondly, the extracts printed are such as to suggest beyond possibility or mistake that the main purpose of the book is to furnish a selection of the most lubricious passages in literature. The Tribunal cannot regard this as an honest purpose in bibliography and for that reason, and in consideration of the character of the extracts as a whole, decides that this book is indecent within the meaning of the Act.
