

CLIMATOLOGICAL TABLE—Summary of the Records of Temperature, Rainfall, and Sunshine for October 1976—continued

settled weather over the North Island, and on most days the rain extended also over the South Island, except for Otago and Southland. Cold temperatures were again reported in eastern districts of the South Island. During the next two days this depression continued to move away to the east but another centre crossed Northland. Rain was reported in northern and eastern districts of the North Island and also on the West Coast.

A slow-moving trough of low pressure moved on to the country from the west on the 22nd and rain was reported mainly in Northland and on the West Coast. On the following day this trough, together with a small associated depression, crossed the North Island with light rain there. On the 24th, while this depression still lay east of the North Island, another trough of low pressure moved on to the South Island, causing rain on the West Coast and in parts of Southland. During the next two days a depression crossed the South Island with an associated trough of low pressure, followed by a change to very cold southerlies. Strong to gale north-westerlies brought considerable rain at first to western districts. The southerlies brought showers to many districts, especially in the east, and in the South Island the 26th was the coldest day of the month.

From the 27th to the 29th an anticyclone moved across the country and only isolated showers were reported. On the last two days of the month a depression passed just to the north of Northland while an anticyclone moved slowly eastward past Campbell Island, and a weak trough of low pressure moved over the South Island. Some rain was reported over most of the North Island and also in Fiordland, Southland and Otago.
