DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

Five issues of this magazine have now been before the Tribunal (Decisions 745-747, 799, and 832). In decisions 745-747 the Tribunal noted; "The interest in contemporary affairs is very limited and light-weight. The dominant concern in the cartoons, text . . . and the illustrations, is with presenting sex for entertainment and amusement. The explicitness of some of this material, and the indulgent tone with which extreme and perverted manifestations of sexual interest are allowed for, make these issues clearly unsuitable for younger readers and marginal for adults."

In considering subsequent issues, the Tribunal has been aware of a trend toward greater emphasis upon the sexual content of the magazine.

While this issue continues the trend, it also reveals a subtle change in tone over previous issues. Indulgence has given way to prudence. Three articles in particular, contribute to this view. They are "Sex Tapes" (which constitutes a forum for readers to relate their sexual excesses), an article on telephone masturbation and sex fantasia services and a sequence of photographic illustrations depicting the seduction of a young girl by her aunt. These articles, together with other material dealing with the subject of sex, affect the overall tone of the magazine and, thus, its dominant effect is to debase and exploit sex. Those articles which are intended to be informative and serious remain light-weight and limited and, in the Tribunal's view, are included merely as camouflage to render acceptable indecent parts of the magazine. Thus, this issue of Oui fails to meet the criteria for our consideration under Section 11 of the Act.

The Tribunal classifies this magazine as indecent.

Dated this 1st day of April 1976.

LAURENCE M. GREIG, Chairman.
