FOREST LORE OF THE MAORI

By Elsdon Best

DOMINION MUSEUM BULLETIN No. 14

421 p. 1977

$17.95

Printed without textual alteration, the work provides an important basis for any study of old-time Maori economics and perhaps more importantly of his attitude to what was a major part of his environment. It will be of more general interest today than when first written, since it stresses so fully that causes made by the Maori people of their natural resources, and supplies basic material for further studies in ethnobotany and ethnozoology. The reverence which the old time Maori showed towards natural resources mirrors the modern concern for ecological principles.

GOALS AND GUIDELINES

an energy strategy for
New Zealand

MINISTER OF ENERGY. 1978.

Energy consumption is a fundamental part of modern life and its provision an important part of our economy.

Chapter 1 reviews recent events in the world energy market.

Chapter 2 considers the development of New Zealand's present pattern of energy production and consumption.

The need for conservation of energy, and the means by which changes in consumption methods can achieve this are discussed in Chapter 3.

Chapter 4 is an examination of New Zealand's energy resources, their present use and their potential.

Chapter 5 goes on to consider the alternative sources which New Zealand could turn to, particularly the renewable resources.

Goals and guidelines for the country's energy strategy are proposed in Chapter 6.

Chapter 7 looks at each of the guidelines, within the framework of New Zealand's present situation.
