Decision of Films Censorship Board of Review

PURSUANT to section 82 of the Cinematograph Films Act 1976, Columbia Warner Distributors applied for a review of the feature film Eyes of a Stranger.

Having viewed the film in Wellington on 24 September 1981, a majority of members decided to approve the film for exhibition to persons 16 years of age and over only, subject to six excisions. The classification will be accompanied by the note: "This film may be disturbing to some".

The film, of the suspense genre, is concerned with a series of rape-murders conducted by a psychopathic killer. As the murders are committed one after another, a young news reporter gradually pieces together enough evidence to identify the murderer, but has difficulty in persuading her lawyer boyfriend to accept the evidence and help her. In the meantime the killer has become aware of her knowledge of his activities and both she and her younger sister, who is blind, deaf and dumb, are targeted as the next victims.

The theme is a credible one. Although the sexual assaults portrayed were violent and perverse, the majority of the Board did not feel that these scenes were injurious to the public good. The last of these—on the handicapped sister of the reporter—is defeated by her continued resistance and success in fighting back. The Board therefore considered that as the theme was obviously a relevant one, for women in particular, and was realistically handled, that it would be appropriate to approve the film for public exhibition.

It was felt that the restricted classification, together with the note: "This film may be disturbing to some", would give sufficient warning of the nature of the film. The excisions in the main feature included two for offensive language, four for violence, and one for sexual violence. The Board also viewed a teaser trailer and main trailer with the film. The teaser trailer was approved for General Exhibition without excision. The main trailer was approved for General Exhibition subject to one excision for sexual violence.

J. M. PRIESTLY, Chairman.
