

There was some discussion concerning the language used in the film. This was not considered by board members to be offensive in the context of the film, or to be injurious to the public good. The language used was the normal patois of New Zealand teenagers.

In terms of section 28 of the Cinematograph Films Act 1976, The Scarecrow was approved for exhibition with the classification GA.

J. M. PRIESTLEY, Chairman.

Decision of the Films Censorship Board of Review

PURSUANT to section 82 of the Cinematograph Films Act 1976, New Zealand Film Services applied for a review of the film Exhibition. The review was held in Wellington on 11 March, 1982.

The film is a documentary, much in dialogue form, about the life of Claudine Beccarie, an actress in French pornographic films. The film sets her work in the context of her life, her friends and her family and deals in some depth with her values and attitudes. It contains a number of scenes demonstrating techniques used by actors and actresses in pornographic films, and includes explicit scenes of cunnilingus, fellatio, lesbian love-making and masturbation.

It was noted that while the sex scenes were explicit, they were not linked with violence, and were relevant to the theme of the film and its context. The explicit scenes in question were erotic rather than pornographic. The film had overall artistic merit.

Members of the board were agreed that the film would be of social and cultural value in the context of a film festival as defined by the Act, and that in such a context it would not be injurious to the public good with an RFF20 classification. The board considered that this film could be shown without injury to the public good as part of a major Film Festival of the type which exhibited say 30 feature films covering a broad range of film, over the space of a fortnight. Such festivals in New Zealand conditions are usually confined to metropolitan centres.

In terms of section 28 of the Cinematograph Films Act 1976, Exhibition was approved for exhibition with the classification RFF20, Auckland, Wellington, Christchurch and Dunedin. The board noted that it was open to the distributor to seek, subject to section 31, a geographic extension of this classification from the Chief Censor should other appropriate film festivals warrant it.

J. M. PRIESTLEY, Chairman.
