JONATHAN HUNT, Postmaster-General.
In the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of a complaint by National Union of Railwaymen:

Warrant Holder: Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand (Television New Zealand).

Chairman: B. H. Slane.

Members: Lionel R. Sceats and Anne E. Wilson.

Co-opted Members: N. L. MacBeth and P. J. Downey.

Background

The National Union of Railwaymen was concerned in March 1984 to learn that the New Zealand Railways Corporation proposed to hire the use of broadcasting facilities of TVNZ, outside normal broadcasting hours, to convey a message to railway staff. This was being done because of the Government’s so-called deregulation of the transport industry and the proposed release of the study by the American consultants, Booz-Allen and Hamilton. Effectively this type of broadcast would enable the General Manager of Railways of the Corporation to preserve balance in its programmes and the opportunity to present its views, by the Corporation “providing an equal period of time within the programme” to enable this to be done. This was on the basis of an alleged statutory responsibility of the Corporation to provide balance in its programmes and the requirements of the relevant rules. The Corporation declined to provide such time. For no reason that is clear in the papers the question of the Union hiring time immediately before or after the broadcast does not seem to have been raised by the Broadcasting Corporation or the Union.

On 20 March the Chairman of the Corporation replied to the Union, which wrote again on 28 March 1984. The broadcast by the Railways Corporation was made on TV1 shortly after 11 p.m. on 29 March 1984, following the close of normal broadcasting. The broadcast was aimed at all who worked for the Railways Corporation. Apparently the staff had been given notice of the television broadcast and requested to tune in. The fact of the broadcast was not trailed by TVNZ.

The broadcast was in the form of a statement by the General Manager of Railways in which he told the staff (and anyone else who happened to be looking) that the Railways Corporation chairman would be announcing what were described as new business strategies and releasing the Booz-Allen Report to the union leaders and the public the following day. The general manager outlined these new strategies including a new management structure.

The broadcast spoke of having negotiations with union leaders; of the need for improved productivity; of adjusting manning levels; and the public the following day. The general manager outlined these new strategies including a new management structure.

Rule 1.1 (g) of the Television Programme Rules requires broadcasters:

“To show balance, impartiality and fairness in dealing with political matters, current affairs, and all questions of a controversial nature.”

Rule 1.2 of the separate Television Advertising Rules requires that:

“Advertisements which are a form of programme material, must meet all standards and requirements laid down in the programme rules.”

For the sake of completeness it is necessary to record also a recent rule limiting immediate industrial and political advertising. Rule 1.17 provides:

“Industrial relations advertising is permissible but will not:
(a) include material which denigrates any other party to a dispute;
(b) imitate in any way an existing programme, format or any identifiable personality.”

These various rules are based on and give effect to section 24 of the Broadcasting Act. Section 24 (1) (e) stipulates: “that when controversial issues of public importance are discussed, reasonable efforts are made to present significant points of view from all sides and, where a programme contains material that is in some degree controversial was not such as to require immediate balancing material in the same programme. The obligations of the warrant holder could be met in various ways such as in news and current affairs programmes.”

This complaint was made on the basis of a breach of the Rules and not on section 24. The Union submitted quite correctly that the Rules can, as in some cases they do not do, establish higher standards than the Act itself requires. The Rules however must obviously be read in the light of as well as being subject to the express provisions of the statute.

Decision

This broadcast was undoubtedly one that dealt with controversial issues concerning such matters as redundancies, staff levels and changes of services, but it did so merely by way of introduction and information about a full public announcement concerning them that was to be made the following day. The programme in the particular situation here was not such as to require immediate balancing material in the same programme. The obligations of the warrant holder could be met in various ways such as in news and current affairs programmes.

If this was not going to be the case then the Broadcasting Corporation would have been obliged to have found some appropriate way in which to have achieved a programme balance in respect of those controversial issues which were of public importance. In the particular situation here the Corporation knew that the Booz-Allen Report was to be released the day after the broadcast and would be available to the Union, and that the Union would obviously be making public statements on the issues.

There is a complicating factor in the particular situation here. This broadcast was not simply a normal programme or advertisement intended for the general public. It had a restricted target audience, namely employees of the Railways Corporation, which of course would have included all the members of the Union. At the same time any member of the public would have been free to have watched the broadcast. If the broadcast was substantially restricted in its content merely to members of the target audience only, then special considerations might apply. But in this decision the Tribunal leaves that matter open and deals with this complaint on the basis that some of the matters discussed were of public importance.

This type of broadcasting, with industrial and political overtones, is new. The Tribunal would not wish to see it unduly restricted at this stage of development. It would become an anomalous situation if someone were able to pay for time to put forward certain industrial or political views, and then to require that those who may feel passionately that they are not adequately provided for, be given a right of rebuttal within certain time periods.

Industrial relations advertising is a delicate area. It is one where the warrant holder has a great responsibility to consider carefully the nature and form of the material being broadcast. The responsibility for what is broadcast lies with the warrant holder who has a clear obligation to consider the material intended to be broadcast in the context of Press Council policy. It is not adequate for the warrant holder merely to take the view that he has hired out time, is not responsible for the content of the material that is to be broadcast, relies on the hirer to abide by the rules, and will only consider subsequent to broadcast whether there has been a breach of the rules or not.

The warrant holder may also have to consider subsequently the correctness or otherwise of the decision made by its staff. Industrial relations advertising cannot be treated differently from any other advertising as far as the responsibility of the Broadcasting Corporation is concerned.

There are many ancillary issues canvassed in the internal reports of the Broadcasting Corporation. The Tribunal does not have to determine the validity or otherwise of these and accordingly makes no comment except to the extent indicated in the caution set out above. The experience of this broadcast and the complaint made may cause the Broadcasting Rules committee to give further consideration to the rules in respect of this type of broadcasting and whether they need to be more specific. That however is for the committee to decide.

Neither the advertising rules, nor the programme rules require absolutely that balance be achieved within the same programme. Section 24 (4) (c) quoted above, with its reference to the period of current interest, specifically provides that this need not be so. The rules being silent on the point as to the time within which balance is to be achieved, it is normal to be adopted is that set out in the statute unless there are unique circumstances that do not exist here. Clearly there was controversy about the Railways' policy decisions which were publicly announced the following day. No complaint is made by the Union that its views were not reasonably presented in reply during the period of current interest in the news foreshadowed by the general manager in his broadcast aimed at the railways staff. Accordingly it cannot be said that the advertising or the programme rules had been breached.

In all the circumstances therefore the complaint of a failure of this programme to comply with the rules is not upheld.

Co-opted Members

Messrs Macbeth and Downey were co-opted as persons whose qualifications and experience might be of assistance to the Tribunal in the determination of the complaint. They took part in the hearing and the deliberations of the Tribunal but the decision is that of the permanent members.

Dated the 12th day of April 1985.

Signed for the Tribunal:

B. H. SLANE, Chairman.
