The Standards Act 1965—Draft New Zealand Standard Specifications Available for Comment

PURSUANT to subsection (3) of section 23 of the Standards Act 1965, notice is hereby given that the following draft New Zealand standard specifications are being circulated.

Number and Title of Specification

DZ 6101 Classification of hazardous areas—

Part 1: Explosive gas atmospheres. $11.00 (incl. GST).

This standard will provide guidance for the classification of hazardous areas according to the existence of or likelihood of the existence of an explosive gas/air mixture. Zones 0, 1 and 2 are covered. These are sometimes referred to as Class I areas.

The draft applies to open and enclosed areas, in all above-ground situations, where there may be a risk due to the presence of flammable gas or vapour mixed with air under normal atmosphere conditions.

This standard does not apply to underground workings including coal mining; processing and manufacture of explosives; areas which may be affected by oxygen enrichment; areas where risks may arise due to the presence of combustible dusts; or potential catastrophic failures such as the bursting of pressure vessels, pipelines or tanks.

Part 2: Combustible dusts. $11.00 (incl. GST).

This proposed standard sets out requirements for the classification of hazardous areas according to the existence of, or the likelihood for the existence of, combustible dusts. Zones Y and Z are covered—such areas are sometimes referred to as Class II areas.

The draft standard applies to open and enclosed areas where ambient air temperature and pressure apply. Areas where higher and lower atmospheric temperatures and pressures are present are not excluded provided that their effects on the properties of the flammable materials are taken into account. It also considers areas where hybrid mixtures exist.

This standard does not apply to areas where inherently explosive dusts are present; underground workings of coal mines; or areas which may be affected by oxygen enrichment.
