

Which is Which?

The New Zealand Gazette will now be published in five components. A detailed list of the contents of each appears on the back of this issue.

The New Zealand Gazette (Principal Edition)

Published every Thursday at 4pm under a green banner and of interest mainly to government watchers. This Gazette will feature notices on constitutional and governmental business: proclamations, orders in council, warrants and applications, a section dedicated to land notices other than Land Transfer Act notices, a Parliamentary summary, and a general section.

This edition will be complemented by supplements publishing emergency notices and the promulgation of regulations.

Special Editions

Published as and when required with a maroon banner. Deal with announcements of constitutional importance.

The Commercial Edition

The bright blue Gazette, published every Wednesday at 4pm. Notifies the business and professional community of matters relating to corporate affairs such as company and bankruptcy notices, and matters concerning the operation of charitable trusts, incorporated societies, and credit unions. Includes general notices of a commercial or business nature.
