(S.A. 114/2/2: 935–6)
The Tribunal withdrew the last direction of its own motion on 21 September 1981.

The Standard of the Corporation's Compliance

In the course of considering a further complaint by Mr Turner about the announcement by the liquid manufacturer that the liquid had been first approved personally by one of the following persons:

(a) The Director-General of Radio New Zealand;
(b) The Advertising Manager of Radio New Zealand;
(c) The Director-General of Television New Zealand;
(d) The Advertising Manager of Television New Zealand;
(e) The person for the time being acting as deputy for any of the above-named persons.

(2) All staff responsible for accepting advertisements shall be informed of this direction and that if any doubt exists as to the application of this direction to any advertisements submitted for broadcast, then approval should be obtained from the person named in paragraph 1 of this direction.

In the same decision, the Tribunal issued a further direction which was a direct consequence of the upholding of a series of complaints by Mr Turner about the advertising of alcohol.

“3) No advertisement containing the brand name or corporate title Lion or Lion Breweries shall be broadcast without the prior consent of the Tribunal.

The Tribunal warned the Corporation that if its procedures did not accord with the direction, the Corporation risked a finding of breach of warrant.

The Application

The Corporation applied for the revocation of the direction on 16 November 1984. It applied on the grounds that there were practical difficulties faced by executives in Radio New Zealand in enforcing the rule about liquor advertising.

The Corporation also submitted in a letter dated 3 September 1984 the following policy statement as having been adopted by its Board:

"Interpretation of the rules on liquor advertising should be conservative, so that the Corporation cannot be seen to be promoting the use of alcohol for its own sake."

It then set out a detailed procedure to which the Tribunal will refer later and which, the Corporation said, would be an adequate replacement for the direction.

The Hearing

Counsel for the Corporation, Mr Hudson, submitted at the beginning of the hearing that the direction to the Corporation was derived from the beginning in that:

1. It did not specify any warrants; and
2. The Tribunal had no jurisdiction to give a direction to the Corporation in respect of any of its stations which had not committed a breach of the rules.

He submitted that, while there was no doubt that the Tribunal could give such a direction under section 83(1) as presently worded, (as amended by section 18(1) of the Broadcasting Amendment Act 1982) the wording of the subsection in 1981 was more restrictive. Mr Hudson argued that the focus of the subsection might become such as to make personal vetting of liquor advertising to local station managers. He said that in any case of doubt or new commercials that raised questions of interpretation, copy was referred to the Chief Copywriter who is the day to day arbiter of copy policy.

Mr Craig stated that, in considering the practical difficulties faced by executives in endeavouring to comply strictly with the letter of the direction of August 1984, Radio New Zealand adopted a set of house rules which had been approved by the Board of the Corporation. These rules indicated the policy statement referred to above and which, the Corporation said, would be an adequate replacement for the direction.

Mr Craig said that in that particular case, of a competition involving a liquor outlet, the advertising agency had given Radio New Zealand an assurance that the purchase of liquor was not a condition of entry. Radio New Zealand accepted this assurance.

The entry form had not been printed at that time. It seemed that it was Mr Turner who discovered and drew Radio New Zealand's attention to the fact that, although the purchase of liquor was not necessary for entry into the competition, eligibility for the major prizes was limited to contestants who had a dozen cans of Steinlager.

Mr Hudson took a procedural point in the course of cross-examination of Mr Craig. Mr Hudson objected to Mr Turner’s production as cross-examination material of a document disclosed under the Official Information Act 1982. He cited section 48 of the Act and submitted that disclosure of a document under the Act did not authorise its re-publication.

Mr Craig stated that the Tribunal was

Decision No. 14/87
COM 6/84

Before the Broadcasting Tribunal

In the matter of an application by the Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand for revocation of a direction relating to liquor advertising.

Chairman: B. H. Slane.

Co-opted Member: Brian W. Stephenson.

Counsel: B. Hudson for Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand.

Appearance: Mr C. R. Turner.

DECISION

This is an application by the Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand ("the Corporation") for the revocation of a direction to the Corporation issued by the Tribunal in 1981 under section 83(1) of the Broadcasting Act 1976.

Background

From 1977 onward, Mr Clifford Reginald Turner brought a number of complaints in which the Tribunal held that the Corporation had breached the Rules relating to liquor and tobacco advertising. The Tribunal upheld several more of Mr Turner's complaints in a decision given on 16 May 1980 (Decision 3/80). Early in 1981, the Corporation itself upheld two of Mr Turner's complaints and by June 1981 the Tribunal had upheld a further two.

Because of the number of complaints upheld, the Tribunal had on 16 May 1980 directed the Corporation to:

"... notify staff responsible for accepting advertisements of the limitations imposed by the then Regulation 14 and the Radio Rules and Standards."

In Decision No. 14/81, the Tribunal observed that there were:

"... cases where the advertisements were carelessly accepted and should never have been broadcast."

The Tribunal therefore issued a further direction in more detailed terms:

"(1) No advertisements associated with liquor or mentioning liquor or including a liquor brand name or the name of any vendor of liquor shall be broadcast unless the test thereof has been approved personally by one of the following persons:

(a) The Director-General of Radio New Zealand;
(b) The Advertising Manager of Radio New Zealand;
(c) The Director-General of Television New Zealand;
(d) The Advertising Manager of Television New Zealand;
(e) The person for the time being acting as deputy for any of the above-named persons.

(2) All staff responsible for accepting advertisements shall be informed of this direction and that if any doubt exists as to the application of this direction to any advertisements submitted for broadcast, then approval should be obtained from the person named in paragraph 1 of this direction.

In the same decision, the Tribunal issued a further direction which was a direct consequence of the upholding of a series of complaints by Mr Turner about liquor advertising:

"(3) No advertisement containing the brand name or corporate title Lion or Lion Breweries shall be broadcast without the prior consent of the Tribunal.

The Tribunal warned the Corporation that if its procedures did not accord with the direction, the Corporation risked a finding of breach of warrant.

The Application

The Corporation applied for the revocation of the direction on 16 November 1984. It applied on the grounds that there were practical difficulties faced by executives in Radio New Zealand in enforcing the rule about liquor advertising.

The Corporation has also submitted in a letter dated 3 September 1984 the following policy statement as having been adopted by its Board:

"Interpretation of the rules on liquor advertising should be conservative, so that the Corporation cannot be seen to be promoting the use of alcohol for its own sake."

It then set out a detailed procedure to which the Tribunal will refer later and which, the Corporation said, would be an adequate replacement for the direction.

The Hearing

Counsel for the Corporation, Mr Hudson, submitted at the beginning of the hearing that the direction to the Corporation was derived from the beginning in that:

1. It did not specify any warrants; and
2. The Tribunal had no jurisdiction to give a direction to the Corporation in respect of any of its stations which had not committed a breach of the rules.

He submitted that, while there was no doubt that the Tribunal could give such a direction under section 83(1) as presently worded, (as amended by section 18(1) of the Broadcasting Amendment Act (No. 2) 1982) the wording of the subsection in 1981 was more restrictive. Mr Hudson argued that the focus of the subsection might become such as to make personal vetting of liquor advertising to local station managers. He said that in any case of doubt or new commercials that raised questions of interpretation, copy was referred to the Chief Copywriter who is the day to day arbiter of copy policy.

Mr Craig stated that, in considering the practical difficulties faced by executives in endeavouring to comply strictly with the letter of the direction of August 1984, Radio New Zealand adopted a set of house rules which had been approved by the Board of the Corporation. These rules indicated the policy statement referred to above and which, the Corporation said, would be an adequate replacement for the direction.

Mr Craig said that in that particular case, of a competition involving a liquor outlet, the advertising agency had given Radio New Zealand an assurance that the purchase of liquor was not a condition of entry. Radio New Zealand accepted this assurance.

The entry form had not been printed at that time. It seemed that it was Mr Turner who discovered and drew Radio New Zealand's attention to the fact that, although the purchase of liquor was not necessary for entry into the competition, eligibility for the major prizes was limited to contestants who had a dozen cans of Steinlager.

Mr Hudson took a procedural point in the course of cross-examination of Mr Craig. Mr Hudson objected to Mr Turner's production as cross-examination material of a document disclosed under the Official Information Act 1982. He cited section 48 of the Act and submitted that disclosure of a document under the Act did not authorise its re-publication.

Mr Turner's arguments

In opposing the revocation of the direction, Mr Turner argued that the incident involving the competition was sufficient reason for not revoking the direction. He submitted that, as four complaints about liquor advertising on radio had been upheld since January 1983, clearly Radio New Zealand had not considered the rules when it accepted this advertising.
Regarding Radio New Zealand's substitution of its own procedure for the Tribunal's direction, Mr Turner compared the Director General's position to that of a disqualified motorist asking a court to lift the disqualification on the grounds that it was a nuisance and simultaneously asking the court to ignore the motorist's driving in disregard of the disqualification. Mr Turner invited the Tribunal to substitute an even stronger direction.

Decision

Dealing with the Corporation's submissions, first, we do not consider that the lack of mention of specific warrants in the direction is a defect of any substance. Madudson's second submission raises more difficult questions. Section 83 (1) in 1981 read:

"Where it appears to the Tribunal that any broadcasting station is being operated in a manner contrary to the programme rules made under this Act and notified to the holder of the warrant issued in respect of that station the Tribunal ... may give to the holder such directions in writing as the Tribunal thinks necessary to ensure that the rules are complied with."

In its present wording, Section 83 (1) reads:

"Where it appears to the Tribunal that the holder of a warrant has been failing to comply with any rules made under section 26 of this Act and notified to that holder, the Tribunal ... may give to the holder such directions in writing as the Tribunal thinks necessary to ensure that the rules are complied with."

(The emphasis is the Tribunal's.)

Subsection 2 provides that if any matter is broadcast from a broadcasting station contrary to the provisions of any such directions, the warrant holder shall be deemed to have committed a breach of the conditions of the warrant. If Mr Hudson is right, the Tribunal could not have imposed the direction on any BCNZ station which had not previously been in breach of the Rules. Against Mr Hudson's submission, two points can be made:

1. Under both-wordings of the Act directions are to be given to the holder of the warrant. No express words confine the terms of the direction to being applicable only to the station which has breached the Rules.
2. The directions may be "as ... necessary to ensure that the rules are complied with." Networking and national sales of advertising to run on several or on all the warrant holder's stations mean that, if a direction is given to centralise the procedure for approving advertising, the direction in practice will affect all stations owned by that warrant holder. In any event, on the evidence the Corporation failed to comply even in respect of those radio stations which had been the subject of the earlier complaints.

The Tribunal does not uphold the submission.

Dealing with Mr Hudson's procedural point, section 48 (2) of the Official Information Act protects the owner's copyright in documents directed under that Act. That protection does not however prevent such documents from being reproduced for the purposes of a judicial proceeding; Section 19 (4) of the Copyright Act 1962. In section 2 of the same Act, "judicial proceeding" means a proceeding before a court, tribunal, or person having law or consent of the parties the power to hear, receive and examine evidence. Clearly this Tribunal is within that definition and therefore an objection to the production of documents as a copyright infringement does not apply. We did not consider that the Corporation was prejudiced by the production of the document and allowed its use in cross-examination.

The Tribunal has taken account of the Corporation's arguments that, after the initial period, compliance with the direction in its original form has been difficult. To a question from the Tribunal, Mr Craig responded that the Corporation had confined its thinking to having the direction revoked. It had not considered the possibility of having its own procedure substituted as directed by the Tribunal in place of the earlier direction. When this possibility was put to him, he replied that he considered that the Corporation would have no problem in complying with such a direction if the Tribunal were to give it.

The Tribunal has also taken into account Mr Turner's arguments. The Tribunal notes that the Corporation appeared to put itself above the original direction. When the direction was issued in clear and specific terms the Corporation purported to modify it without such documents from being reproduced for the purposes of a judicial proceeding and referred to simulated location broadcasts (live or pre-recorded). Such copy shall be submitted in writing (whether by teleprinter message, memo or facsimile) or by audio tape.

"Location Broadcasts:

Any promotion associated with or intended to be held at or near a liquor outlet is to be cleared first with the Director of Sales and Marketing, or, in his absence, with the Controller of Programmes and is to have regard to Rule 1.11.4.

Notes:

(a) This instruction should be interpreted as also applying to simulated location broadcasts (live or pre-recorded).
(b) Such clearance should be sought in writing through the Chief Copywriter who will obtain the necessary approval.

"Contests:

Prior to running an advertisement for a contest related to liquor, radio stations shall sight an entry form and retain this copy on file along with a signed certificate from the manager of the outlet that the entry does not require the purchase of liquor. The entry form must state that the purchase of liquor is not required directly or indirectly.

In addition, a complete list of prizes shall be obtained. Auction entries may not be offered as a prize in any competition, even if entry is free.

If there is to be no entry form, a poster or point of entry material must be sighted and a copy or description of the material retained on file.

The competition must not be likely to interest under 20 year olds to lure them to a liquor outlet.

The direction to the Corporation in respect of Television New Zealand reads:

"No advertisements associated with liquor or mentioning liquor or including a liquor brand name or the name of any vendor of liquor shall be broadcast unless the copy has first been approved personally by one of the following:

(a) The Director-General of Television New Zealand.
(b) The Director of Sales & Marketing of Television New Zealand.
(c) The person for the time being acting as deputy for any of the above-named persons."
The following direction is applicable to both radio and television:

"All staff responsible for accepting radio or television advertisements shall be informed of this direction. If any doubt exists as to the application of this direction to any advertisements submitted for broadcast, approval should be sought from one of the persons named in the direction in respect of Radio New Zealand or Television New Zealand, as the case may be."

These directions are to commence from the date of this decision and to continue in force until revoked. After the expiry of one year from the date of this decision, the Tribunal will entertain an application by the BCNZ to revoke the directions.

Co-opted Member

Mr Stephenson was co-opted to the Tribunal as a person whose qualifications and experience were likely to be of assistance. He took part in the deliberations of the Tribunal but the decision, in accordance with the Act, is that of the permanent members.

Dated the 15th day of May 1987.

Determinations Made by Commissioner of Inland Revenue Under Section 649c (1) of the Income Tax Act 1976

Pursuant to section 64c (7) of the Income Tax Act 1976 the following Schedule is hereby published, comprising determinations made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue under section 64c (1) of the Income Tax Act 1976.

SCHEDULE

APPORTIONMENT OF INCOME AND EXPENDITURE ON A DAILY BASIS

DETERMINATION G1: This determination may be cited as “Determination G1: Apportionment of Daily Income and Expenditure”.

1. Explanation (which does not form part of the determination).

This determination requires that income derived or expenditure incurred in respect of a period shall be apportioned on a straight line basis among the income years in which the period falls, according to the number of days in the period calculated on either a 365- or a 360-day basis.

2. Reference—This determination is made pursuant to paragraphs (a) and (b) of section 64c (1) of the Income Tax Act 1976. This determination is required to be applied in circumstances referred to in other determinations.

3. Scope of determination—Unless its application is specifically excluded in another determination, this determination applies to all amounts of income derived or expenditure incurred in respect of a period where the amount of the income or expenditure has been calculated pursuant to any other determination made pursuant to paragraphs (a) or (b) of section 64c (1) of the Income Tax Act 1976.

4. Principle—The apportionment of income and expenditure on a daily straight line basis in respect of a period of not more than 1 year permits the allocation of income and expenditure to income years within the period on a simple basis. It assumes that income and expenditure accrue at a flat dollar rate over each day in the period.

5. Interpretation—In this determination—

(a) Unless the context otherwise requires, expressions used have the same meanings as in sections 64b to 64m of the Income Tax Act 1976;

(b) “Period” means the term, not exceeding 1 year, commencing immediately after a payment is payable or receivable and ending when the next payment is payable or receivable;

(c) The number of days in a period calculated on a 365-day basis means the actual number of days in the period including the ending date of the period but excluding the starting date of the period; and

(d) The number of days in a period calculated on a 360-day basis means the number of days falling within the period including the ending date of the period but excluding the starting date of the period and calculated as if every calendar month had exactly 30 days; and for this purpose—

(i) If the ending date of the period is the 31st day of a month it shall be deemed to be the 30th day of the month unless the starting date of the period is a day within the same month;

(ii) If the starting date of the period is the 31st day of a month it shall be deemed to be the 30th day of the month.

6. Method—For the purposes of section 64c of the Income Tax Act 1976 the income derived or expenditure incurred by a holder or an issuer of a financial arrangement in respect of a period shall be apportioned among the income years of the holder or issuer in which that period falls pro rata with the number of days in the period lying within each income year calculated (at the option of the holder or the issuer) on a 360- or 365-day basis.

7. Example—

On 29 January 1987 a company issues a 180-day bill for $3,000,000, at a discount of $294,000.

The company’s balance date is 31 March, and it elects to recognise the interest expense on a 365-day basis.

There are 61 days from 29 January to 31 March 1987.

Therefore—$180 \times $294,000 = $99,633.33 will be brought into account as expenditure in the company’s 1986–87 income year, and the balance of $194,366.67 will be brought into account in its 1987–88 income year for income tax purposes pursuant to section 64r of the Income Tax Act 1976.

If the company had elected to recognise the interest expense on a 360-day basis, then the number of days from 29 January to 31 March 1987 would have been 62, and amounts of $101,266.67 and $192,733.33 would have been brought into account in its 1986–87 and 1987–88 income years respectively.

This determination is signed by me on the 13th day of May in the year 1987.

JOHN SIMCOCK, Commissioner of Inland Revenue.

REQUIREMENTS AS TO PRECISION

DETERMINATION G2: This determination may be cited as “Determination G2: Requirements as to Precision”.

1. Explanation (which does not form part of the determination).

This determination sets out the level of precision acceptable in calculations made under other determinations made by the Commissioner pursuant to section 64c (1) of the Income Tax Act 1976.

2. Reference—This determination is made pursuant to section 64c (1) of the Income Tax Act 1976. It defines the precision acceptable in calculations made under other determinations made by the Commissioner pursuant to section 64c (1) of the Income Tax Act 1976.
3. Scope of Determination—Unless specifically excluded therein, this determination applies to all other determinations made pursuant to paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) of section 64E(1) of the Income Tax Act 1976.

4. Principle—The test for sufficient precision is whether an increase in precision will give a significantly different result in respect of income derived or expenditure incurred in any period to which an amount that is deemed to be income or expenditure is to be allocated.

5. Interpretation—In this determination, unless the context otherwise requires, expressions used have the same meanings as in sections 64B of 64M of the Income Tax Act 1976.

6. Method—A calculation is sufficiently precise for the purposes of the application of any determination made under section 64E(1) of the Income Tax Act 1976 if the income derived or expenditure incurred from a financial arrangement in any period to which an amount that is deemed to be income or expenditure is to be allocated would not be changed by more than $5 by the use of greater precision in any intermediate calculations.

7. Example—(1) The calculation of the income on the yield to maturity basis for this example is discussed in paragraph 7 of Determination G3: The Yield to Maturity Method.

A financial arrangement, with a face value of $1,000,000 is purchased for $1,012,500 on 12 March 1987. It bears interest at 7 percent per annum payable semi-annually and is repayable at par on 15 January 1988.

The coupon payments are made on 15 May and 15 November each year.

Using the yield to maturity method and 1 decimal place gives the accrued income schedule in Table 1 below.

Table 1: YIELD TO MATURITY 16.2 PERCENT

<tr>
<td>15 Nov 1988</td>
<td>1,070,000.00</td>
<td></td>

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Using a yield to maturity of 16.23 percent, on which Table 2 is based, allows the more precise calculation of accrued income. The difference column in Table 2 displays the difference between the calculated accrued income in Table 1 and the calculated accrued income in Table 2.

Since some of the net accrued amounts differ by more than $5 more precision is required in the intermediate calculation.

If any one of the differences is greater than $5 it is necessary to repeat the calculation. As this is the case the calculation must be repeated at greater precision.

Table 4 demonstrates the results using a yield to maturity of 16.2308 percent. The differences are all less than $5 compared with Table 3 and would be acceptable for income tax reporting purposes.

(2) The calculation of the amounts used in this example are derived from paragraph 7 of Determination G1: Apportionment of Income and Expenditure on a Daily Basis.

On 29 January 1987 a company issues 180-day bill for an amount of $3,000,000 at a discount of $294,000. The company's balance date is 31 March 1987 and it elects under Determination G1: Apportionment of Income and Expenditure on a Daily Basis to use a 365-day year.

There are 61 days from 29 January to 31 March 1987. As 31 March falls between the issue date and the redemption date it is necessary to apportion the $294,000 expenditure incurred between 2 income years. To do so it is necessary to calculate 61/180 as a proportion.

Initial Calculation: 61/180 = 0.3
Amount allocated to income year 1 = 0.3 x 294,000 = 88,200
Amount allocated to income year 2 = 0.7 x 294,000 = 205,800

The company is required to do a second calculation using greater precision.

Second Calculation: 61/180 = 0.34
Amount allocated to income year 1 = 0.34 x 294,000 = 99,960
Amount allocated to income year 2 = 0.66 x 294,000 = 194,040

As the change in expense allocated to each year is greater than $5 it is necessary to increase the precision so the company tries:

Third Calculation: 61/180 = 0.339
Amount allocated to income year 1 = 0.339 x 294,000 = 99,666
Amount allocated to income year 2 = 0.661 x 294,000 = 194,334

As the change in expense allocated to each income year is still greater than $5 it is still necessary to increase precision:

Fourth Calculation: 61/180 = 0.3389
Amount allocated to income year 1 = 0.3389 x 294,000 = 99,636.60
Amount allocated to income year 2 = 0.6611 x 294,000 = 194,363.40

The comparison must be repeated again as the difference has not yet reduced to $5 or less:

Fifth Calculation: 61/180 = 0.33889
Amount allocated to income year 1 = 0.33889 x 294,000 = 99,633.66
Amount allocated to income year 2 = 0.6611 x 294,000 = 194,366.34

Since the difference is less than $5 it is acceptable to use the ratio 3389 to allocate expenditure to the income year ending on 31 March 1987.

This determination is signed by me on the 13th day of May in the year 1987.

JOHN SIMCOCK, Commissioner of Inland Revenue.

YIELD TO MATURITY METHOD

DETERMINATION G3: This determination may be cited as "DETERMINATION G3: Yield to Maturity Method".

1. Explanation (which does not form part of the determination). This determination states how the yield to maturity method shall be applied to a financial arrangement to calculate income derived or expenditure incurred for the purposes of section 64C of the Income Tax Act 1976.

It applies to all financial arrangements where the amounts and dates are known not later than the first balance date of the issuer or holder after issue or acquisition, as the case may be, and determined in New Zealand currency.

The approach adopted is to define a constant annual rate R representing the yield to maturity of all the cash flows in the financial arrangement. Income derived and expenditure incurred is assumed to be compounded on the date of each payment. If they wish holders or issuers may simplify the calculations by using regular periods, such as half-years or weeks, where most or all of the cash flows occur at such intervals.

However where a period between payments is longer than 1 year, income derived and expenditure incurred must be compounded at yearly intervals.

In general there is no explicit formula for a yield to maturity in terms of the cashflows. The yield to maturity is definied as the discount rate at which the cashflows accumulate to zero. As part of the method, the amount of income derived or expenditure incurred to be compounded at the end of each period is calculated as a fraction F multiplied by the principal outstanding during the period. This income derived and expenditure incurred is then added to the principal outstanding for the next period (if one exists). The final payment must equal the principal outstanding during he final period plus the income derived or expenditure incurred during that period.

The amount of income derived or expenditure incurred by the holder or issuer in respect of a period is to be apportioned among income years in the period on a daily basis using Determination G1: Apportionment of Daily Income and Expenditure.
In most normal commercial financial arrangements, the annual rate will be unique, positive and less than 100 percent per annum; arrangements that do not meet these criteria are excluded and may be submitted for individual consideration by the Commissioner.

2. Reference—This determination is made pursuant to section 64e (1) (a) of the Income Tax Act 1976. It defines the application of the yield to maturity method to financial arrangements of the class described in paragraph 3 of this determination.

3. Scope of Determination—This determination applies to the class of financial arrangements that has the following attributes—

(a) All amounts payable or receivable under the financial arrangement, and the dates on which the amounts are payable or receivable, are known not later than the first balance date of the issuer or holder following the date of issue or acquisition as the case may be; and

(b) All such amounts are determined in New Zealand currency—

but does not apply to any financial arrangement in respect of which the annual yield to maturity rate R determined in accordance with paragraph 6 would be—

(c) Not unique; or

(d) Less than or equal to zero; or

(e) Greater than 100 percent.

4. Principle—The yield to maturity method apportions the total income or expenditure under a financial arrangement so that—

(a) The amount apportioned in respect of each period between payments represents a constant annual rate R on the amount of the principal outstanding during each period; and

(b) The rate R is such that at the time the financial arrangement is issued or acquired the discounted value of the money to be given and received accumulates to zero.

The amount apportioned to each period is then allocated to income years on a daily basis in accordance with Determination G1: Apportionment of Daily Income and Expenditure.

5. Interpretation—(1) In this determination—

(a) Unless the context otherwise requires, expressions used have the same meanings as in sections 64b to 64m of the Income Tax Act 1976;

(b) “The amount of the principal outstanding” during any period shall be equal to—

(i) The amount of the principal outstanding during the previous period (if any);

plus (ii) The amount (if any) payable by the holder or receivable by the issuer (as the case may be) immediately before the beginning of the period;

plus (iii) The amount calculated in respect of the previous period in terms of paragraph 6 (a) of this determination;

less (iv) The amount (if any) receivable by the holder or payable by the issuer (as the case may be) immediately before the beginning of the period;

(c) “Period” and “period between payments” means a term commencing immediately after a payment is payable or receivable and ending when the next payment is payable or receivable;

Provided that if a period exceeds 1 year it shall be deemed to comprise one or more periods each of 1 year followed (or preceded, at the option of the holder or issuer as the case may be) by a period of less than 1 year.

(2) For the purposes of applying paragraph 6 (a) of this determination—

(a) Where the greatest common divisor of all the periods between payments is—

(i) A year or 12 months, N shall be taken as 1:

(ii) A half year or 6 months, N shall be taken as 2:

(iii) A quarter or 3 months, N shall be taken as 4:

(iv) A month, N shall be taken as 12:

(v) A fortnight, N shall be taken as 26:

(vi) A week, N shall be taken as 52:

(b) Where 1 or 2 periods have a greatest common divisor different to the greatest common divisor of all other periods this fact shall be disregarded, and for each of those 1 or 2 periods N shall be taken as 365 divided by the number of days in the period including the ending date of the period but excluding the starting date of the period.

6. Method—If R is a constant annual rate and if—

(a) In respect of each period between payments an amount is obtained by multiplying the amount of the principal outstanding during that period by a fraction F where—

\[ F = \frac{100}{N} \times N, \]

N is—

(i) The amount defined in paragraph 5 (2) of this determination; or

(ii) Where paragraph 5 (2) (a) of this determination does not apply, 365 divided by the number of days in the period (including the ending date of the period but excluding the starting date of the period)—

which amount forms part of the principal outstanding during the next succeeding period; and

(b) The total of the principal outstanding during the final period between payments and the amount obtained in respect of that period pursuant to subparagraph (a) of this paragraph equals the amount of the final payment,— the amount obtained pursuant to subparagraph (a) shall be the amount of income derived or expenditure incurred in respect of that period by the holder or issuer (as the case may be).

7. Example—On 12 March 1987 a holder acquires for $1,012,500 the right to receive the following income—

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Amount</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>15 May 1987</td>
<td>$70,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15 November 1987</td>
<td>$70,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15 May 1988</td>
<td>$70,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15 November 1988</td>
<td>$1,070,000</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The holder balances on 31 March, and chooses to allocate income on a 365-day basis.

The periods are expressed in 6-month multiples, so N = 2, except for the first (broken) period for which

\[ N = \frac{360}{64} = 5.703125. \]

It will be found that the constant annual rate R is 16.2308 percent per annum.

The following schedule may then be constructed, showing the income in respect of each period:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Period Ending</th>
<th>Income in Respect of Period</th>

</tbody>
</table>

Notes (1) $100 × 5.703125 × $1,012,500

(2) $100 × 2 × $971,315

(3) Check = $1,280,000 − $1,012,500

The following schedule illustrates the allocation to the holder’s income years on a 365-day basis:

<table>
<thead>

</tr>
<tr>

</tbody>
</table>

Note: The yield to maturity method will enable the calculation of an amount of income or expenditure for the final income year to which a financial arrangement relates. However for the purposes of calculating the amount deemed to be assessable income or expenditure incurred in the final income year it is necessary to apply section 64f of the Income Tax Act 1976—the base price adjustment.
