Dumping and Countervailing Duties Act 1988

Goods of Australian Origin No Longer Subject to Anti-dumping Duty

As a result of the enactment of the Dumping and Countervailing Duties Amendment Act 1990, the following goods are no longer subject to anti-dumping duty, with effect from 1 July 1990:

“Arc welding electrodes for electric welding, manufactured by Cigweld, a division of Commonwealth Industrial Gases Ltd., Australia” as notified in the New Zealand Gazette of 4 June 1987.

“Certain unworked aluminium sheet, (excluding enclosure sheet and can body stock) plate, (excluding tread plate) and coil, (excluding coil stock for venetian blinds and opossum guard coil) of 0.2mm thickness and above, of various alloys, tempers and dimensions” manufactured by Comalco Aluminium Ltd. of Australia and Austral Bronze Crane Copper Ltd. of Australia as notified in the New Zealand Gazette of 2 February 1988.

“Aluminium passenger catamarans of 18 metres in length or longer” manufactured by North Queensland Engineers and Agents Pty. Ltd., Australia as notified in the New Zealand Gazette of 4 March 1988.

“Bollard pull harbour tugs, being goods of a class or kind manufactured or intended to be manufactured in New Zealand” manufactured by Carrington Slipways Pty. Ltd., Australia as notified in the New Zealand Gazette of 15 March 1990.

Note

The removal of anti-dumping measures in relation to goods of Australian origin follows from agreement between the Governments of New Zealand and Australia under ANZCERTA that anti-dumping measures against goods the origin of either member state be removed, with reliance instead on competition laws to deal with anti-competitive behaviour in trans-Tasman trade.

The obligation to pay any countervailing duty remains on goods of Australian origin where a valid notice imposing the countervailing duty is in force.

The obligation to pay anti-dumping duty incurred up to 1 July 1990 also remains.

Dated at Wellington this 2nd day of July 1990.
