Summary of Bills Introduced

Civil Aviation Law Reform Bill

This Bill effects significant changes to the law relating to the New Zealand civil aviation system and replaces the Civil Aviation Act 1964. The Bill has its origins in the Swedavia-McGregor Report of 1988, which is a comprehensive review of the civil aviation safety regulations and the resources, structure, and functions of the Civil Aviation Division of the Ministry of Transport.

SUMMARY OF CHANGES

The Bill overhauls the Civil Aviation Act 1964 and includes the following principal changes:

- (a) The Ministry of Transport will be the Civil Aviation Authority for New Zealand:
- (b) The Minister of Transport will have the principal function of promoting safety in civil aviation:
- (c) The Secretary for Transport will assume the functions formerly carried out by the Director of Civil Aviation, where these are carried forward by the Bill:
- (d) The Ministry will carry out a monitoring function rather than an inspectorial function in relation to civil aviation:
- (e) The participants in the civil aviation system will be primarily responsible for ensuring their own compliance with the requirements of the Act and of the regulations and rules made under it:
- (f) Much of the content of the present regulations and all of the various forms of tertiary legislation relating to aviation safety (such as CASO's and NOTAM's) will be gradually replaced by rules made by the Minister of Transport:
- (g) The Secretary for Transport will have power to make emergency rules:
- (h) Different levels of safety may apply to different types of operations within the civil aviation system, so long as New Zealand meets the relevant international obligations in this area:
- (i) The Bill specifies the persons who require civil aviation documents and allows the rules to specify activities that can be performed only by persons holding such documents:
- (j) Applicants for certain civil aviation documents will have to satisfy a "fit and proper person" test.

Education Amendment Bill

This Bill amends and inserts new parts into the Education Act 1989.

Part I of the Bill covers Miscellaneous Amendments relating to such matters as foreign students, school holidays, payment of teacher salaries and powers of entry into schools.

Part II of the Bill relates to tertiary education and training and covers such matters as councils and their constitutions, duties, and functions and charters, corporate plans, staffing, bulk funding, finance and the National Education Qualifications Authority.

Part III of the Bill relates to student allowances and early childhood education and home-based care and covers such matters as funding, charters and licensing of Education Centres and the provision of student allowances.

The Title, Part I, (clauses 2 to 16), and provisions relating to the interpretation of terms which come into force when the Act receives the Royal assent. Provisions relating to the establishment of tertiary institutions and the Councils of those institutions and provisions establishing new authorities in connection with tertiary education and training come into force on 1 July 1990. Other provisions relating to tertiary institutions come into force on 1 September 1990. Certain amendments of the Access Training Scheme Act relating to Regional Employment and Access Councils come into force on 1 October 1990. Certain amendments of the Apprenticeship Act 1983 relating to the constitution of New Zealand Apprenticeship Committees come into force on 1 November 1990. Some of the provisions that amend regulations come into force on 1 January 1991 and others on 1 February 1991.

Health Research Council Bill

This Bill—

- (a) Establishes the Health Research Council of New Zealand and defines its functions and powers; and
- (b) Dissolves the Medical Research Council of New Zealand; and
- (c) Provides for matters incidental thereto.

The provisions of the Bill have their origins in the recommendations of the committee established by the Cabinet in July 1988 to review the organisation and public funding of biomedical and health systems research in New Zealand.

The report of that committee was publicly released on 29 June 1989 under the title of Research for Health.

The Bill is to come into force on 1 July 1990.

State Insurance Bill

This Bill provides for the State Insurance Office to be constituted as a company under the Companies Act 1955 owned by the Crown. The Bill authorises the Minister of Finance and the responsible Minister, on behalf of the Crown, to form a public company under the Companies Act 1955 and to subscribe for and hold shares in the company, and provides that on a date to be appointed by the Governor-General by Order in Council, the property, rights, and liabilities of the State Insurance General Manager and the State Insurance Office shall vest in that company. The Bill contains a number of provisions that are consequential on the vesting of that property, and those rights and liabilities in the company.

The Bill makes consequential amendments to the Export Guarantee Act 1964.

Indecent Publications Act 1963

Decision No. 88/89

Reference No.: IND 66/89

Before the Indecent Publications Tribunal

In the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963, and in the matter of an application by the Society for Promotion of Community Standards Inc. for a decision in respect of the following publications: Taboo, Issues 1, 3 and 5, published by Taboo Magazine, Auckland:

Chairman: Judge R. R. Kearney.

Members: R. E. Barrington, A. J. Graham and S. C. Middleton.

Hearing at Wellington on the 28th day of November 1989.

Appearances: Reverend Gordon Dempsey for the Society for Promotion of Community Standards Inc.; P. B. Fenemor, managing director, Rock's Marketing Services Ltd., distributor of the magazine. Written submissions by Alan J. Douglas, managing director, Aztec Publishing Ltd.

Decision

In August 1989 P. M. Bartlett in her capacity as director of the Society for Promotion of Community Standards Inc. was granted leave by the Minister of Justice for the society to submit issue 1 of Taboo to the Tribunal for a decision as to whether it is indecent or not or for a decision in its classification. That leave was granted on terms of the provisions contained in section 14 (2) of the Indecent Publications Act 1963. In October 1989 leave to submit issues 3 and 5 of the magazine to the Tribunal was likewise granted by the Minister.

The Tribunal considered the applications in respect of the 3 issues of Taboo at its public sitting in Wellington on 28 November 1989, and the submission in writing of the Society for Promotion of Community Standards Inc., was presented to the Tribunal by the Reverend Gordon Dempsey, the president of the society. Prior to the sitting, the 4 members of the Tribunal involved in the sitting had received and read a 6-page submission from Alan J. Douglas, the managing director of Aztec Publishing Ltd. Mr Douglas is the editor of the publication and although the magazine does not disclose that Aztec Publishing Ltd. is the publisher of Taboo, that would on the face of Mr Douglas's submission appear to be the case. In his written submission Mr Douglas advised the Tribunal that he would be unable to attend the hearing as he would be overseas at the time but he advised that the managing director of the company distributing the magazine, Rock's Marketing Services Ltd., Peter Fenemor, would be appearing before the Tribunal "to defend Taboo magazine".

Mr Douglas had previously written to the Tribunal on 7 November 1989 and the contents of that letter were clearly considered offensive to the senior officer of the Tribunals Division of the Department of Justice, who because of the offensive nature of the letter, advised Mr Douglas "I will not place correspondence of this nature before the Tribunal and any further correspondence containing like comment will not be acknowledged". No member of the Tribunal has read that letter and Mr Douglas in his written submission advised at its commencement, that the point of view expressed in that letter "I now wish to retract"; I mention this because of the Tribunal's concern at the nature of the written submission actually received and considered by the Tribunal. As Chairman of the Tribunal I found a significant number of the comments made by Mr Douglas offensive to the Tribunal, politicians and others and in fact had Mr Douglas been present in person I would have given him the opportunity to apologise for some of his comments which if presented at a formal hearing could well be found to be contemptuous. I wish to make it clear that the Tribunal, in determining the statutory imposed considerations that it is required to in determining whether the publication should be classified as indecent or indecent in the hands of certain persons, has disregarded entirely the offensive nature of the submission and has given careful and real consideration to those parts of the submission which are quite properly advanced for the Tribunal's consideration. In his submission Mr Douglas states:

"I have always believed that the Indecent Publications Tribunal bans magazines on the grounds of personal distaste, irrespective of whether or not they are 'injurious to the public good'. And I have always felt that the Tribunal should be made to act within the terms of its brief, and not be allowed ban things simply because they might offend certain religious/feminist groups.

The Indecent Publications Act 1963 clearly uses the word 'injurious' rather than 'offensive' or 'prurient', and I am quite certain that the authors of that Act would have said 'offensive to certain people' if that's what they had intended. But they didn't. And in my opinion hundreds of titles have been banned over the years because of the Tribunal's deliberate misinterpretation of the Act."

The Tribunal does not ban publications "simply because they might offend certain religious/feminist groups". The Tribunal has during the 5 years that I have been its Chairman and I believe during the whole of its existence endeavoured to judge the issues before it in terms of the prescription provided by Parliament in the Indecent Publications Act 1963, being guided by the decisions of the Court of Appeal and the High Court and keeping in mind at all times the long history of decisions of the Tribunal itself.

Mr Douglas in his submission and in his editorial comments in his magazine quite frankly and openly advocates that New Zealand should move away from what he sees as "its victorian attitudes" and that its citizens should be allowed the freedom to read what they choose including most if not all forms of pornographic literature including photographs depicting sexual activity between adults.

In his submission Mr Douglas advised the Tribunal that the publication Taboo has 2 main functions, firstly "that of the contact magazine, to introducing liberal-thinking to each other" and secondly to display a concern for what life is really like "including the 'kinky' side of life". Mr Douglas submits that a puritanical society courts deviants and his oft expressed belief is that society would be far better if it allowed its children to freely and openly explore and give reign to their sexuality without repression. In issue 5 of Taboo at page 22, Mr Douglas presents an article written by himself under the title "Kids and Sex". In his submission he invites the Tribunal to carefully read and consider this article. It strongly advocates freedom of sexual contact and activity between children and attaches blame to the Churches and religion for its suppression of sexual freedom and suggests that such suppression is responsible for a great deal that is wrong with society today including in particular, sexual violence.

Towards the conclusion of his submission Mr Douglas quite openly suggests that there is possibly something underhand in the way that his publication comes before the Tribunal for consideration and I quote from his submission:

"One of the things which strikes me as unusual with this particular hearing is that Taboo issue 5 was listed with you within 3 weeks of its publication date. I think this is the first time any magazine has appeared before you so quickly. Usually there is a delay of several months. It suggests to me that Patricia Bartlett has someone pulling strings for her. Who? And for what reason? I may be entirely off the mark, but without wishing to paint myself paranoid, I can't help wondering just what the power structure is at the Indecent Publications Tribunal. After-all, I have often referred to Jim Bolger as "the Catholic bumpkin", and I have been scathing of his kow-towing to the American military. It does just cross my mind that there might be more to this issue than meets the eye. There must be several opposition MPs who would appreciate seeing an end of an anti-National magazine published by an outspoken editor/publisher. I have no commercial advertisers to crack the whip over me, no bosses, in fact Taboo might just be the only totally independent, commercially available, large (relatively speaking) circulation magazine in New Zealand. And it's growing. It could become a threat. I ask you, is it just slightly possible that certain behind-the-scenes characters might want to ban Taboo for reasons unrelated to sex?"

The Tribunal members are certainly not aware of any "power structure" at the Indecent Publications Tribunal and its 5 members are staunchly independent. They would individually and collectively resist most strongly any interference with their function as Tribunal members, be it overt or covert. Mr Douglas's speculation that the Tribunal will adjudicate on his publication motivated by "fear of the adverse publicity Patricia Bartlett will rain down upon you if you pass such a magazine" is without foundation. The Tribunal is of course constantly aware of public opinion frequently expressed in relation to pornography and its members take note of and consider such expression no matter from whom it may come.

I have mentioned in this decision Mr Douglas's submission before turning to the other submissions made because it was the first submission received by the Tribunal. I wished to highlight and answer some of those concerns expressed by Mr Douglas.

The Reverend Gordon Dempsey's submission is only 2 pages in length and it concentrated on drawing to the attention of the Tribunal, those aspects of the publication with Reverend Dempsey's society submits should result in an unconditionally indecent classification. The society also submits and requests that an order should be made in terms of section 15A of the Act declaring the publication indecent for a period of up to 2 years.

The Reverend Dempsey was questioned by Mr Fenemor (whose submission will be referred to later in this decision) and he was asked by Mr Fenemor to provide some further information relating to those persons who were the subject of a public opinion poll which had been carried out and a report prepared for the society. The Reverend Dempsey produced a copy of the report to Mr Fenemor and subsequently made that report available to the Tribunal. Mr Fenemor presented a 7-page written submission to which was appended a copy of a 3-page letter from Mr Douglas as managing director of Aztec Publishing Ltd. to the editor of the Listener dated 25 August 1989. Mr Fenemor, whose company Rock's Marketing Services Ltd. has the contract for distributing Taboo magazine, advised the Tribunal that his company distributed a wide range of magazines covering such subject matter as "Children, Motoring, Fishing, Gardens, and Cooking". Mr Fenemor informed the Tribunal that in the course of distribution his company receives requests from retailers for other magazines and that the strongest and most frequently requested was Taboo. It was as a result of those requests that Mr Fenemor approached Mr Douglas regarding the distribution of his company's publications. Mr Fenemor's submission strongly supported Mr Douglas as a man of strong principles and an honest belief in the cause that he espouses. Mr Fenemor advised the Tribunal that 18 000 copies of Taboo are distributed to 2000 outlets whilst a further 2000 copies go out from the publishers to direct subscribers. Mr Fenemor advised the Tribunal that because of the sensitive nature of the publication there are several self-imposed precautions which have been taken in order to ensure that the publication is purchased by the "targeted market". These include all publications being distributed in sealed plastic bags in order to prevent browsers and/or children from viewing them in retail areas. All magazines carry a self-imposed R18 rating. All retailers are encouraged to display these magazine out of the reach of children.

Mr Fenemor advised the Tribunal that in the event that Taboo magazine is then found indecent that some market feedback has been brought to his company's attention and that:

"I have been told that numerous 'hard core' magazines that are only currently available from areas, such as hotel public bars, etc., shall be 'dropped' onto the market to fill the gap left by the non-appearance of magazines like Taboo. These publications apparently include photos/articles pertaining to such vile acts such as child sex."

In both the submissions presented by Mr Douglas and Mr Fenemor emphasis is placed upon the fact that sexually explicit videos are legally available for hire, while magazines which reproduce pictures from such videos are classified as indecent. The Tribunal has previously, carefully and deliberately refrained from anything other than passing comments on such submissions but we now believe that some expression of the Tribunal's view of this matter should be provided. The Indecent Publications Tribunal has a long history of precedent and a number of decisions have been the subject of review by the High Court. The Court of Appeal has also considered in a number of decisions the test of indecency and in particular the phrase "injurious to the public good". The phrase is found in the interpretation of the word "indecent" in section 2 of the Indecent Publications Act 1963 and it is a definition, which the Tribunal is required in the terms of its governing legislation, to give effect to. That section provides:

"'Indecent' includes describing, depicting, expressing, or otherwise dealing with matters of sex, horror, crime, cruelty, or violence in a manner that is injurious to the public good."

The Act also prescribes the functions of the Tribunal in section 10 as:

"Functions of Tribunal—The functions of the Tribunal shall be—

- (a) To determine the character of any book or sound recording submitted to it for classification:
- (b) To classify books and sound recordings submitted to it as indecent or not indecent or as indecent in the hands of persons under a specified age or as indecent unless their circulation is restricted to specified persons or classes of persons or unless used for a particular purpose, as the case may be:
- (c) To hear and determine any question relating to the character of a book or sound recording referred to it by a Court in any civil or criminal proceedings (including proceedings under section 25 of this Act), and to forward a report of its findings to that Court."

and the matters to be taken into consideration by the Tribunal are set out in section 11 of the Act:

"Matters to be taken into consideration by Tribunal or Court—

- (1) In classifying or determining the character of any book or sound recording the Tribunal shall take into consideration—
 - (a) The dominant effect of the book or sound recording as a whole:
 - (b) The literary or artistic merit, or the medical, legal, political, social, or scientific character or importance of the book or sound recording:
 - (c) The persons, classes of persons, or age groups to or amongst whom the book or sound recording is or is intended or is likely to be published, heard, distributed, sold, exhibited, played, given, sent, or delivered:
 - (d) The price at which the book or sound recording sells or is intended to be sold:
 - (e) Whether any person is likely to be corrupted by reading the book or hearing the sound recording and whether other persons are likely to benefit therefrom:
 - (f) Whether the book or the sound recording displays an honest purpose and an honest thread of thought or whether its content is merely camouflage designed to render acceptable any indecent parts of the book or sound recording.

- (2) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, where the publication of any book or the distribution of any sound recording would be in the interest of art, literature, science, or learning and would be for the public good, the Tribunal shall not classify it as indecent.
- (3) When the Tribunal decides that any picture-story book likely to be read by children is indecent in the hands of children under a specified age that picture-story book shall be deemed to be indecent in the hands of all persons.
- (4) Where any Court is required to classify or determine the character of any document (other than a book) it shall take into consideration, with such modifications as are necessary, the matters set out in subsections (1) and (2) of this section."

The members of the Tribunal are well aware that video recordings and films depicting quite explicit sexual activity are freely available for viewing by adults and the members are quite aware that in the case of video recordings that these can be and are indeed watched by children. The history of the development of film and video censorship has proceeded along quite separate lines from that of the written word, photographic displays and comic books and although the Tribunal members note the disparity between its decisions and those of the other censorship authorities it finds itself to a large extent guided by its own previous decisions and bound by the decisions of the Court of Appeal and the High Court. Persons closely associated with the work of the Tribunal including members of the legal profession, publishers, importers and distributors will be well aware that the Tribunal's classification of indecent is not a fixed and rigid stance and that there has been throughout its history a broadening of its perception of what is "injurious to the public good" and it is correct as Mr Douglas says in his submission that many books which would have been considered indecent and so classified by the Tribunal 5 years ago are today given an age restriction classification only. As Chairman of the Tribunal I have consulted my fellow members and they concur that it is not for the Tribunal to make a dramatic movement in the benchmark of acceptability and if there is to be a dramatic change in the prescription, then it should be done by legislation and not by judicial intervention unless there is evidence which warrants such change being made. Tribunal members are of course, guided and not dictated to by me in matters of that kind but although that guidance does not pass without substantial questioning by members, my understanding is that no member at this stage wishes to take a stand and oppose the continuation of the precedential approach of the Tribunal.

Taboo magazine in issue 5 contains 20 pages of advertisements under the heading "Keylink", some with photographs of adults seeking to correspond and meet other adults with many of those advertising seeking to engage in a great range of sexual and intimate activities. The remainder of the 94 pages of the publication are comprised of a significant number of photographs of naked or partly clad females with a concentrated emphasis on the genitalia, many of which photographs are as explicit and revealing as the most explicit of that kind that the Tribunal has seen in the last 5 years. There are also a number of photographs displaying male and female models, female models and transvestite models engaged in explicit sexual activities. The publication as indicated earlier in this decision contains an editorial by Mr Douglas espousing the cause of sexual freedom and applauding promiscuity, the remainder consists of essays, articles, letters and comments and newspaper reports on a great variety of sexual behaviour. There are some positive articles about the dangers of homosexual anal intercourse and warnings to readers about practices which could result in infection by the AIDS virus.

Subsequent to the Tribunal reaching a decision in relation to this matter, further submissions were received from Mr Douglas. Originally it was not intended to read and consider those submissions as they were received not only subsequent to the hearing but subsequent to the decision actually being completed and signed by me as Chairman. Because of the history of this matter it was subsequently considered important that the Tribunal should take into account the further submissions and this has now been done. There is nothing in the additional submissions presented by Mr Douglas which changes the view reached by the Tribunal.

The Tribunal is satisfied that the material contained in each of these publications is injurious to the public good and classifies them as unconditionally indecent. The Tribunal is also satisfied that a serial restriction order should issue classifying the publication Taboo as unconditionally indecent and makes an order accordingly.

Dated at Wellington this 7th day of March 1990.
