Dear Minister

I am pleased to submit to you Report No 16 of the Law Commission, Company Law Reform: Transition and Revision.

This Report supplements our earlier Report No 9, Company Law: Reform and Restatement in two respects. Firstly, since the earlier Report was published in June 1989 the Law Commission has had the advantage of receiving a range of comments upon both that Report and the draft legislation recommended in it. Accordingly, the present Report contains recommendations for a variety of improvements to the draft legislation. Secondly, it contains recommendations for and drafts of transitional and consequential legislation which will be required for comprehensive company law reform to be implemented.

You will recall that on 24 May 1990 the Commission submitted to you a package of materials which included virtually all of the material contained in the present Report. At the same time the Commission advised that, to comply with the Law Commission Act 1985 and to ensure availability to those interested in this area, those materials - together with an introduction addressing the more significant policy issues - would be published as a formal Report. The interval of three months since 24 May has been occupied by further discussions with interested parties, including the Department of Justice, and the making of some further minor adjustments.

The consequential and transitional legislation contained in this latest Report deals with the reregistration of companies already registered under the present Companies Act 1955, changes to the 1955 Act during a three year transitional period, flat and office owning companies, and insurance companies. The topic of receiverships is covered by the draft Property Law Amendment Act set out and recommended in our Report No 9. Company charges would be dealt with by the draft Personal Property Securities Act set out and recommended in our Report No 8 (April 1989)

We recommend the draft legislation contained in this Report, and that in our Reports Nos 8 and 9 (subject to our proposals for modification). If the legislation is introduced into Parliament we will of course be pleased to assist in any way we can.

Yours sincerely

Owen Woodhouse, President.

Hon W P Jeffries MP, Minister of Justice.

Preface

In this Report the Law Commission revisits the law relating to companies which was the subject of its earlier Reports No 9, Company Law: Reform and Restatement (June 1989) and, in part, No 8 in A Personal Property Securities Act for New Zealand (April 1989). This involves both "fine tuning" of the three pieces of draft legislation contained in those earlier Reports, and the production of four further pieces of legislation which would be necessary if the Companies Act 1955 were replaced by the legislation recommended in the earlier Reports.

REVISITING COMPANY LAW

The Law Commission has a continuing statutory responsibility to promote the systematic review, reform and development of New Zealand law. That responsibility enables it to revisit its earlier work - unlike, say, a Royal Commission which dissolves after reporting on a specific topic - and to improve and enlarge upon the work it has already done. That revisiting process has been assisted by the maintenance of the many channels of communication with the professional and commercial communities which were established by the Commission while it was preparing its Reports Nos 8 and 9. So the present Report has benefited from the discussions we have had with many interested individuals as well as those with such bodies as the Department of Justice, the New Zealand Society of Accountants and the Securities Commission.

The response to Reports Nos 8 and 9 has been generally favourable, and occasionally flattering. The Commission is pleased that its work on Report No 8 has apparently contributed to, and is specifically made part of the reviews being made of the law on security interests in personal property by the Law Reform Commissions of the Commonwealth of Australia, and of the State of Victoria, at the direction of their respective Attorney-General. The connection between the New Zealand and Australian work on this topic will be enhanced by the appointment as consultants to the Australian inquiry of two of the members of the group which prepared the draft legislation included in our Report No. 8.

The Commission is also pleased that Dr Len Sealy, a New Zealander, a fellow of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and a leading writer on company law, felt able to commence a paper on directors' duties delivered to the Commonwealth Law Conference held in Auckland earlier this year, with the following remarks:

Last year, the New Zealand Law Commission published a Report containing proposals for a major overhaul of company law - perhaps the most radical reappraisal of this branch of law that has been put forward anywhere in the Commonwealth (including the UK) since limited liability was introduced in 1855; certainly a document to be ranked with the Gower report (Ghana, 1961) and the Dickerson report (Federal Canada, 1971) for its rigorous analysis and forward-looking approach.

“Fine tuning”

Chapters 1, 2 and 3 of this Report explain the Commission's proposed alterations and revisions to the draft Companies, Property Law Amendment and Personal Property Securities Bills which were set out and recommended in Reports 8 and 9. A full text of the draft Companies Bill is set out in the Appendix to this report and shows the changes now recommended. Although there are a significant number of changes, most are minor. Those of greater significance include the following:

- the streamlining of provisions on company names;
- incorporation of a cash value equivalent factor in the process of share issue;
- extension of the distribution “claw back” provisions to reduction of liability;
- clarification of provisions on redeemable shares;
- new provision for unanimous assent to company actions;
- adjustments to the “fundamental duty” of directors (of particular relevance to joint venture companies);
- removal of auditors from the court's discretionary relief provision;

- changes to provisions governing dealings between a company and other persons;
- recast provisions on the departure of auditors;
- the conferring of powers of inspection of the Registrar of Companies; and
- an additional sanction of personal liability for company debts where a director acts in breach of a disqualification order.

In suggesting these changes the Law Commission has taken considerable care to retain the integrity of the underlying principles of the original draft. As to those principles, the Commission emphasises the importance of the purposes articulated in Section 2 of the draft Bill and in paragraphs 14 to 33 of Report No 9.

While there is always scope for further improvement, those proposing changes to the Commission's draft will need to bear in mind that the draft was its own coherence and internal consistency. It is not based on the 1955 Act and employs distinctly different concepts and terminology in a number of critical areas. Nor is the Commission's draft based on any one overseas model, although the (US) Model Business Corporations Act has been of great assistance, as was the work of the Dickerson report which preceded the Canada Business Corporations Act.

On the question of drafting, the Law Commission retained Richard Clarke and David Goddard of Chapman Tripp Sheffield Young, who drafted the Commission's Companies Bill, to assist with the draft legislation contained in this Report. Their assistance was extensive and greatly appreciated.

TRANSITIONAL AND RELOCATED PROVISIONS

Chapter 4 of the Report contains a commentary on and the text of a new draft Companies (Reregistration) Act to govern the process whereby companies registered under the Companies Act 1995 would become subject a new Companies Act during a three year transition period.

Chapter 5 contains a commentary on and the text of a new draft Companies (Transitional Provisions) Act which would make significant amendments to the 1995

Act so as to apply to all companies at the beginning of the transition period some of the reforms contained in the proposed new Act.

The process of streamlining the subject matter of the 1955 Acts meant the exclusion from the Commission's draft of provisions on flat and office owning companies. The Commission recommends that this topic be dealt with in the Land Transfer Act 1952, and Chapter 6 contains the commentary on and text of a new draft Land Transfer Amendment Act to that effect.

Chapter 7 contains a commentary on and the text of a new draft Insurance Companies' Deposits Amendment Act which would relocate and streamline provisions dealing with insurance companies which are presently found in Part XIII of the Companies Act 1995.

The relocation of provisions relating to flat and office owning companies and insurance companies continues the theme established by our proposals in Reports Nos 8 and 9 whereby provisions on company charges and receiverships will be dealt with in statutes other than the Companies Act.

If legislation along the lines of the Commission's draft Companies Bill is to be enacted it would have to be accompanied by the six other enactments contemplated in this Report: A personal Property Securities Act; a Property Law Amendment Act; a Land Transfer Amendment Act; an Insurance Companies' Deposits Amendment Act; a Companies (Reregistration) Act; and a Companies (Transitional Provisions) Act.

The Commission has not attempted to prepare consequential changes to the Income Tax Act 1976 or the Securities Act 1978. The Inland Revenue Department and the Securities Commission respectively are currently considering the implications for those Acts of the enactment of legislation along the lines of that recommended by the Law Commission.

The Commission's package of legislation makes no express provision for co-operative companies. Submissions from such companies indicate some strong feelings that the Commission's proposal would disturb a satisfactory state of affairs. We suspect that such concerns may be met if the flexibility of redeemable shares is fully appreciated. However, a review of laws governing a range of mutual organisations may be appropriate, depending in part on the terms of any legislation introduced by the Government.

SECURITIES LAW REFORM

As was emphasised in our Report No 9, the Commission's draft Companies Bill is intended to be "core" company law, dealing with the formation and termination of companies and their internal organisation between those events. Although necessarily concerned with the powers of directors and appropriate protection of minority shareholders, the Bill is not directly concerned with specific regulation of securities and other investments offered to the general public. The distinction between securities law and company law was emphasised in Report No 9, and it was assumed that "additional safeguards imposed in the public interest under the Securities Act 1978 will be superimposed upon companies that offer securities to the public" (paragraph 18).

Although a distinction may properly be made between company law and securities law, the latter is built upon the former. Accordingly, the Commission welcomed the announcement contained in the Economic Statement presented to Parliament by the Minister of Finance on 20 March 1990 that:

... the Government has decided that the first step [ie, in business law reform] is to get the basic structure right. Accordingly, the Minister of Justice, will shortly bring to Parliament a Bill to revise the Companies Act, based on the draft work last year of the Law Commission.

The reasoning underlying the Minister of Finance's statement together with the Commission's wide statutory responsibilities mean that it has taken a close interest in proposals for reform of the laws relating to the securities market. Since the publication of Report No 9 in June 1989 the Sharemarket Inquiry Establishment Unit (better known as "the [Sir Spencer] Russell Committee") has produced a major report (published in November 1989), which includes a substantial rewrite of the Securities Act 1978.

As might be expected, there were some differences of emphasis between the work of the Unit and that of the Commission - for example, the Unit would appear to favour a rather greater role for the Registrar of Companies in enforcement matters than is contemplated in the Commission's draft Companies Bill.

In December 1989 the Commission arranged several meetings and seminars in Wellington for Mr R P Falkner, a New Zealander at Norton Rose, Solicitors, London, with particular expertise on the operation of the Financial Services Act (UK). Mr Falkner has also taken a keen interest in the work of the Unit but indicated some concern that

- the Unit's proposals contemplated a significant number of self-regulating organisations but even some of the UK SROs with substantial membership numbers were and are stretched by the financial and administrative demands of self-regulation, and
- the UK experience suggested strongly that there were great advantages in spelling out in detail the rules considered appropriate for a securities market and then, depending on the nature and complexity of such rules, devising a system for their enforcement, and noting that the Unit's work offers well defined procedure but lack detail on the rules thought desirable for the securities markets.

More recently there has been some discussion of the possibility of closely aligned or common rules for the securities markets of Australia and New Zealand as part of the process of harmonisation of the business law of the two countries. The Commission notes that, although its proposals for a new Companies Act would result in legislation markedly different from that in Australia (for reasons discussed at paragraphs 36 to 41 of Report No 9), that should not be an impediment to any decision to harmonise the securities laws of the two countries. As is well known, in the USA there are a variety of state companies statutes yet a single federal Securities and Exchange Act.

FINANCIAL REPORTING

In April 1990 the Minister of Justice released the Securities Commission's substantial report, Capital Structure and Financial Reporting in New Zealand (December 1989). That report indicated that the Securities Commission had carefully considered our Report No 9 and included some suggestions for amendments to our draft Companies Bill. Accordingly, we commissioned an analysis and comparison of our proposals and those of the Securities Commission by Greg Tower, a lecturer in accountancy at Massey University with a practical and academic experience in both the USA and New Zealand. Mr Tower's work was the subject of a meeting with the Securities Commission, the New Zealand Society of Accountants and the Department of Justice, and those and other discussions assisted our own further thinking on these issues.

The primary requirement for financial statements under the draft Bill would remain the provision by directors of financial statements given "a true and fair view" of the state of affairs, profit or loss, and cash flow of a company. The primary requirement is reinforced by the reversed onus of proof, the terms of the audit report (where applicable), and the right of shareholders to enforce the board's duty to prepare "true and fair" accounts. The Bill does not carry forward the present Eighth Schedule to the 1995 Act or any equivalent requirements. Amplification of "true and fair" by reference to reasonable and accepted accounting practices is assumed.

The Bill also requires financial statements to comply with any "regulations" made by Order in Council. That reference to regulations was inserted in anticipation of the Securities Commission's report on financial reporting, and is based on the proposition that regulation of financial reporting in the securities market may (but need not necessarily) produce rules which could properly be applied to all companies.

It is not a pre-condition to the operation of the financial reporting provisions of the Bill that any such regulations be promulgated. Indeed, in order to avoid unnecessary regulation and cost being imposed on smaller companies, the power to make standards mandatory for all companies should be used cautiously.

As a result of the various discussions on these topics, the Law Commission recommends limited changes to the "accounting" provisions in our draft Companies Bill - in the "solvency test", in a reference to compliance with financial reporting requirements imposed under other enactments, in elaboration of the nature of the audit report, and in further provisions on non-reappointment of auditors which enhance the independence of the audit.

STATE CAPITAL REQUIREMENT

The Securities Commission's report proposes an "equity cushion" for companies operating in the securities market which would take the form of a requirement that no distribution be made by the company unless its assets exceed the sum of its liabilities together with the amount in a "stated capital account".

The Law Commission is inclined to agree that maintenance of confidence in the securities market is likely to be enhanced by a requirement for some cushion in addition to the "bare" solvency test in our draft Bill. However, it retains a preference for a multiplier factor being applied to the solvency test - such as the 1.25:1 ratio of assets to liabilities mentioned in the California statute - and so avoiding the reintroduction of unnecessary complexity which would be removed for other companies with the abolition of par value.

In addition, Mr Tower has pointed out that the amounts recorded in a stated capital account would not be particularly relevant as they would be based on historical or modified historical costs. In part, this difference of opinion reflects the fundamental and continuing debate in accounting between the merits of "objective" but less relevant data as against contemporary but more "subjective" data.

ACCOUNTING STANDARDS

The Law Commission is also inclined to agree with the Securities Commission that comparability of financial reporting is an important aspect of the securities market, and that there is a need for mandatory rules containing more detail than is appropriate for a statute. On the other hand, as mentioned earlier, we would be concerned if financial reporting obligations imposed on companies soliciting funds from the public were automatically imposed on the vast majority of smaller companies which do not operate in the securities market.

The Securities Commission's proposals for a three-tier system (the Securities Act 1978, the regulations thereunder, and accounting standards approved by the Review Board) are difficult to evaluate in the absence of indications of the policy to be reflected in those regulations. On the other hand, we have reservations about the Russell Committee's proposal that all approved accounting standards be mandatory (the Securities Commission would require only that non-compliance with lesser standards be explained).

The conflict between the recommendations of the Russell Committee and the Securities Commission in this area appears to derive from their different perception of the role of a Securities Commission in the future. In any event, when a decision is made on the manner of promulgating additional rules on financial reporting (ie, by regulations, or by accounting standards approved by a Review Board) it would be sensible for that decision to be reflected in the mechanism operating under a new Companies Act.

DIRECTORS' DUTIES

The topic of directors' duties is central to company law. Opinions on the way in which those duties should be defined vary widely, and any legislation reform will attract considerable interest. In its work on this topic, the Commission identified overwhelming support for the proposition that the law on directors' duties should be extracted from the common law and made accessible in a companies statute. It was also satisfied of the need to strive to achieve a balance between ensuring accountability and making the position of directors so onerous that people with appropriate skills are dissuaded from retaining or taking up directorships. The Commission is aware that there is already evident a trend for professionals to refuse to accept directorships, and that this cannot assist in improving the quality of corporate management.

The Commission also remains of the view that a coherent set of provisions governing directors' duties must involve some ranking of those duties in order to avoid a confusing conflict between them. It is on that basis that the Commission has provided for a hierarchy of duties in section 101, 102 and 103 of its draft Companies Bill. (See also paragraphs 194-5, 504-5 and 511-13 of Report No 9.)

Any definition of directors' duties in a companies statute raises the question of the relevance of the previous common law. The Commission has refrained from a recommendation that its proposals on directors' duties be described as a code but is confident that the courts would recognise a statutory set of directors' duties as the text of first resort in considering issues in that area. Further, if (as we recommend) the main problem areas of modern company law are addressed directly (eg, minority shareholder remedies, and restrictions on share issues) then some of the current common law rules developed to avoid apparent injustices can be safely set aside. One example may be the concept of "proper purposes" which involves great uncertainty in the absence of identifiable limits to the powers of companies and directors. (The use of the concept to prevent disruption of existing constitutional balances - as in the Privy Council decision in Howard Smith Ltd v Ampol Petroleum Ltd [1947] AC 821 would be overtaken by the Commission's draft dealing with class rights and minority remedies.)

In considering various expressions of concern that the Commission's draft Bill imposes duties on directors which are too onerous, the Commission has noted some misunderstanding of the relevant provisions and has also stressed the importance of the explicit references to "business risk" and "business judgment" in section 2 [Purpose of the Act]. However, the Commission notes that the Companies and Securities Law Review Committee in Australia has recently gone further in recommending the enactment of a specific "business judgment rule" (see the Committee's Report No 10, Company Directors and Officers: Indemnification, Relief and Insurance; May 1990).

On this and various other topics, the Law Commission looks forward to the introduction of legislation, and an informed debate during the legislative process.

I

The Draft Companies Act: “Fine Tuning”

- 1 This chapter explains the Law Commission's recommended modifications to the draft Companies Act contained in the Commission's June 1989 report, Company Law: Reform and Restatement (NZLC R9). These modifications are the result of the further consultations on and consideration of this topic by the Commission since the publication of that report.
- 2 For the purposes of this Report the term “the 1955 Act” refers to the Companies Act 1955 and (for the sake of convenience - if optimistically) the term “the 1990 Act” refers to the draft Companies Act 1990.
- 3 The text of the 1990 Act is set out in the Appendix to this report and indicates additions (double underlined) and deletions (double angle brackets and italicised).
- 4 The paragraphs below provide a concise commentary on the modifications in each section.

PART 1 - PRELIMINARY

Interpretation

- 5 Changes made to the definitions in section 3(1) are as follows:
 - “document” - this definition is based on that found in section 2 of the Evidence Amendment Act (No 2) 1980, and is relevant to several provisions, including the definition of “records” (see sixth definition in this list), sections 139 [Investigation of records], and 147 [Company records to be kept], and the new section 275A [Powers of the inspection by Registrar];

- ``entitled person" - this definition has been added in recognition of the existence of companies where some significant power or entitlement (eg, the right to residue where a solvent company is liquidated) is vested in a person other than a shareholder, and of the right of that person to protect that interest; the defined term is employed in sections 42(3)(b) [Board may authorise a distribution], 102 [Existing shareholders], 126 [Injunction to restrain action], 135 [Prejudiced shareholders] and sections 219 to 221 relating to liquidations;
- ``existing company" - the additional words reflect the registration under Part X of the 1955 Act of companies not formed under that Act;
- ``interests register" - corrects an incorrect cross-reference;
- ``personal representative" - this definition is employed in sections 63 [Transfer of shares] and 74 [Liability of personal representative];
- ``records" - the change reflects the new definition of ``documents" (see first definition of this list);
- ``redeemable" - this definition foreshadows the new section 54A [Meaning of ``redeemable"], and the clarification of section 28 [No nominal value];
- ``special resolution" - this change recognises the possibility that a company constitution may require a special majority in excess of 75 percent in certain circumstances and that such a requirement should be effective.

The solvency test

- 6 The solvency test is a major innovation in the 1990 Act, being of key importance in such provisions as sections 42 [Board may authorise a distribution] and 105 [Solvency]. The dual nature of the test (ie, trading as well as balance sheet solvency) was adopted from the US Model Business Corporations Act. The three changes to section 3(3) of the 1990 Act are designed to clarify this important concept:

- ``normal course of business" - these words were used in section 6.40(c)(1) of the MBCA but omitted from our June 1989 draft as unnecessary, and their reinstatement is designed to minimise fears of uncertainty expressed to us by the NZ Society of Accountants and others;
- ``reasonable in the circumstances" - this language is also taken directly from section 6.40 of the MBCA, and confirms both the basic trust and the flexibility of the solvency test: that company directors should be able to point to some reason for a belief that the company will remain solvent after execution of an action under consideration; and
- ``realisable value" - this elaboration is not found in the MBCA but is designed to incorporate the conventional approach to current valuations, and thus clarify uncertainties (eg, removing the possibility that ``realisable value" means value under ``fire sale" conditions).

PART 2 - INCORPORATION UNDER THIS ACT

Capacity and powers

- 7 The change to section 8 reflects the division of section 135 [Prejudiced shareholders] to create a new section 135A [Failure by directors to comply with Act] containing similar remedies.

Incorporators

- 8 Correction of proofreading slip in section 10.

Application for incorporation

- 9 As the 1990 Act does not specify any maximum number of directors or require a company's constitution to do so (although such may be specified under the constitution: see section 22), section 11(2)(b) has been amended to reflect this optionality. Section 11(2)(d) has been amended in recognition of the possibility of corporate shareholders and their lack of a ``residential" address.

Existing companies to apply for registration

- 10 The deletion of section 13(1) reflects the subsequent development of the draft Companies (Reregistration) Act. The changes to (what was) section 13(2) leave the form, including authentication, of an application to be prescribed under regulations. The change to (what was) section 13(3) reflects the optional character of a maximum number for directors (see also paragraph 9, above, on section 11).

Effect of Effect of registration

- 11 Section 15 has been rewritten to confirm and elaborate the continuity of an existing company which has reregistered.

PART 3 - COMPANY NAMES

Registered names

- 12 Correction of typographical slip in section 17(3).

Application for registration of names

- 13 Section 18 has been streamlined to reflect a revised policy under which constraints on company names would be further reduced, and the Registrar relieved from making decisions on the criterion of "undesirability". The revised prohibitions relate to

- names identical to those on the company names register;
- names expressly protected by statute; and
- names registered otherwise than in good faith for identification purposes.

The last of these is designed to provide a remedy for those aggrieved by the "pirating" of a name.

Registration of name

- 14 The change to section 19(2) reflects the policy changes discussed in paragraph 13, and extends protection to assigned names.

Cessation notice

- 15 The revised title of section 20 reflects the fact that "order" carries connotations of an order from the Court. The textual changes reflect the policy discussed in paragraph 13.

PART 4 - COMPANY CONSTITUTION

Initial constitutional document

- 16 Section 23(2) features a minor drafting improvement.

PART 5 - SHARES

Rights attached to shares

- 17 A reference in section 26(1)(b) to "winding up" has been replaced with the appropriate defined term, "liquidation".

No nominal value

- 18 A new section 28(2) has been added to clarify that the prohibition of nominal or par value does not prevent the issue of redeemable shares. Redeemable share are now defined in section 54A [Meaning of "redeemable"], discussed in paragraph 34.

Share options

- 19 The effect of the former section 30 was less than clear, and its effect in conferring certain shareholder rights on option holders was on further consideration, unnecessary. The new section 30 protects existing shareholders' rights in relation to that grant of share options, and provides that a contract entered into in breach of its requirements is illegal, and so of no effect (unless validated by the Court under the Illegal Contracts Act 1970).

Consideration for issue to be decided on by board

- 20 Sections 39(1) and (2) have been amended to reflect the Securities Commission's recommendation for directors to fix and certify a present cash value for non-cash consideration for shares issued (Capital Structure and Financial Reporting, December 1989, page 5). The fairness and reasonableness of consideration relates to all shareholders, hence the change to subsection (1)(b). And the accidental omission of an offence provision has been remedied with the new subsection (5) (also reflected in section 277(1) [Failure to comply with Act]). Board may authorise a distribution
- 21 A reference to entitled persons with fixed entitlement has been included in section 42(3)(b), as such persons should not be prejudiced by a distribution to shareholders unless the entitlement is expressed to be subject to distributions.

Recovery of distributions

- 22 The more specific reference in section 46(1) to section 42(3) and its modification of the solvency test (as defined in section 3(3)) increases the accuracy of the cross reference and avoids complications in sections 56(2) and 57(2).

Reduction of shareholder liability a distribution

- 23 The new section 46A is concerned with a reduction of shareholder liability which results in the company failing to satisfy the solvency test. It is a replacement for the present rules as to reduction of capital and reregistration of unlimited companies as limited companies.
- 24 Any alteration of the constitution, or acquisition or redemption of shares that reduced the liability of the shareholder to the company is treated as a distribution to that shareholder. Section 42 [Board may authorise a distribution] applies, and the board is required to authorise the alteration, acquisition or redemption in the light of the solvency test. If the solvency test is breached, section 46 [Recovery of distributions] applies, and the liability which was cancelled or reduced is effectively revived.

- 25 Where a reduction in liability is effected by an amalgamation, as where two shares each with a liability to pay $1 are converted into one share in the amalgamated company with no liability attached, section 42 [Board may authorise a distribution] does not apply as the amalgamation provisions already require a solvency resolution. Section 46 [Recovery of distributions] is however applied to such reductions of liability.

Company holding its own shares

- 26 The exception in section 47 referred to sections 49 to 53, which relate to voluntary acquisitions of shares by a company, but not to the compulsory but-out provisions in sections 81 to 83. This omission has been remedied.

Cross-holdings

- 27 Comments were received by the Law Commission that the existing section 48 was inappropriate, as it dealt only with cross-holdings resulting in insolvency and did not address questions of:

- concentration of control;
- watering down of shareholders' interests, falling short of causing actual insolvency; and
- use of subsidiaries to purchase shares to circumvent the share repurchase provisions.

- 28 The Law Commission agrees that the former section 48 should be deleted. After consultation, the Commission has concluded that existing provisions are sufficient to deal with the concerns set out above. The duties of directors of the company and existing shareholders prevent abuse of a concentration of control. These duties, coupled with section 105 [Solvency], require directors not to pay excessive consideration for shares in any company, and may be enforced under Part 8

[Enforcement] in relation to a subsidiary which is paying too much for the company's shares (see in particular section 127 [Derivative actions]).

- 29 The third potential abuse is of more concern, and in Australia has resulted in an assimilation of the rules relating to self-purchase and purchase by subsidiaries. If a parent company procures a subsidiary to make purchases the parent could not make, the parent company's directors would commit a clear breach of section 101 [Fundamental duty] or section 102 [Existing shareholders], which could found actions against the directors under section 127 [Derivative action] or, in the case of a breach of section 102, under section 131 [Personal action by shareholder against directors]. An application could also be made under section 135 [Prejudice shareholders]. Where the subsidiary pays an excessive price for shares in the parent company to selected shareholders, the subsidiary's directors are in breach of their duties to the subsidiary and to the parent company, as a shareholder whose equity is diluted by payments made with an ulterior motive. Shareholders in the parent company could enforce these duties also under section 127 [Derivative actions].
- 30 The Law Commission has concluded that no extra duties or controls are required in relation to cross-holdings, but that a "flag" provision drawing attention to the duties governing the acquisition and use of cross-holdings is desirable. The new section 48 draws attention to the relevant provisions.

Board may make offer to acquire shares

- 31 The reference in section 50(1)(b) to acquisitions of shares, where all shareholders consent in writing, has been deleted. It is superseded by the new section 78A [Unanimous assent to company action] which permits any acquisition to be made with the consent or concurrence of all entitled persons, notwithstanding section 50. The reference in section 51(1) [Special offers to acquire shares] to section 50(1)(b)(ii) has been amended accordingly.

Disclosure document

- 32 Incorrect cross-references in section 52 has been corrected. Cancellation of shares repurchased

- 33 Section 53 provided that shares repurchased voluntarily were cancelled, but did not deal with shares repurchased as a result of a shareholder exercising buy out rights. This omission has been remedied by the inclusion of a reference to acquisition of shares under section 83 [Purchase by company].

Meaning of ``redeemable''

- 34 Section 54A is new, and defines a redeemable share. The importance of a share being redeemable is that if it is redeemable at the option of the holder, or on a fixed date, the repurchase provisions need not be complied with. Those provisions are not relevant where the company has no say in the time of redemption, or the price of redemption. thus the essence of ``redeemability'' is that the constitution provides for redemption for a consideration which is specified, or to be calculated according to a formula, or to be fixed by a suitably qualified and independent person.

Redemption at the option of the company

- 35 A reference to section 54 [Enforceability of contract to repurchase shares] has been included in section 55 to clarify the position in relation to company redemptions.

Redemption at the option of the shareholder

- 36 Section 56 has been redrafted in order to clarify its effect, and ensure that such redemptions need not be authorised in advance by the board under section 42 [Board may authorise a distribution]. The redemption payment made can, if it results in a company failing to satisfy the solvency test, be recovered under section 46 [Recovery of distributions].

Redemption upon a fixed date

- 37 Section 57 has been redrafted in the same manner as section 56.

Financial assistance

- 38 The reference in section 58(1)(b) to financial assistance given where all shareholders consent in writing has been deleted, as it is superseded by the new section 78A [Unanimous assent to company action] which permits financial assistance to be given with the consent or concurrence of all entitled persons, notwithstanding section 58. The references to section 58(1)(b)(ii) in sections 59(1) and 59(3) [Special financial assistance] have been amended accordingly.

Transfer of shares

- 39 Section 63(2) has been amended in two respects. The first recognises the primacy of the Securities Transfer Act 1977 which could be amended to permit scripless share trading. The second enables the personal representatives of a shareholder to sign a share transfer. In the absence of such an express provision, the Law Commission was concerned that the reference to signature by "the present holder" might be understood as excluding this possibility. No such provision is required in relation to assignees in bankruptcy, as section 74 of the Insolvency Act 1967 expressly deals with transfer by the assignee.

Company to maintain share register

- 40 Section 65 has been clarified in a number of minor respects, and the former ambiguous reference to "particulars" of an issue or transfer replaced with specific requirements to name a transferor or transferee. A reference to repurchases and redemptions has been inserted.
- 41 Subsection (1A) [A company may appoint an agent to maintain the share register of the company] is the former section 66(1) [Place of register]. The provision is more relevant to the duty to keep the register than to the place where it is kept, as it may be maintained by an agent even when kept at the company's registered office.

Place of register

- 42 Section 66 has been replaced with a section which expressly permits the establishment of branch registers. Such registers are of particular importance where a company's shares are listed on an overseas exchange. A register within New Zealand must be nominated as the principal register, and copies of other registers kept with it.

PART 6 - SHAREHOLDERS AND THEIR RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS

Liability of shareholders

- 43 A new paragraph (d) has been inserted in section 73(2), to refer to the liability imposed on shareholders in a liquidation under section 210 [Power of liquidators to make calls], which is discussed at paragraph 102. Subsection (4) has been amended to clarify the position established under this Part, namely, that if a liability is set out in the constitution it attaches at any given time to whoever holds the share at that time. Any other outstanding consideration for a share (where, for example, it is issued for a price to be paid over time, although "fully paid" in terms of the 1995 Act) is payable by the person who originally contracted to pay it, rather than by a transferee of the share.

Liability of personal representative

- 44 As the term "personal representative" is now defined in section 3(1) [Interpretation], it has been used in section 74(1), with a consequential amendment to section 74(2).

Unanimous assent to company action

- 45 Section 78A is a very important new provision. The Law Commission accepts the submissions made by a number of bodies and individuals that the 1990 Act imposed excessive formalities on the day-to-day operation of small (and, in particular, one-shareholder) companies. This section permits the formalities which were considered to be a problem to be disregarded completely, if all entitled persons agree, or if they concur in the informal action taken. In a normal company, in which all the section 6 [Essential rights and powers] rights and powers are attached to shares, a company will be able to issue shares, or repurchase shares, for example, without any formalities at all, where the shareholders agree to or concur in the issue or repurchase. The action which may be taken informally is described in subsection (1), and the Sixth Schedule lists the provisions which do not in these circumstances apply.

Liability of shareholders in respect of exercise of powers

- 46 The policy which underlies section 80 is that in exercising basic rights attached to shares, shareholders should be free to consult their interests alone. Consistent with this policy, a reference to resolution of interest groups under section 88(4) [Alteration of shareholder rights] has been inserted.

Minority buy-out rights

- 47 Section 81(b) has been amended to permit a person who holds shares with different beneficial owners to vote one parcel against a resolution, and the other in favour of the resolution, or not at all. The parcel voted against the resolution could then be required to be purchased, under this section. This amendment is required to avoid the denial of buy out rights to trustees, and in particular trustee corporations, holding a number of parcels of shares for a number of beneficial owners, who may have different interests in relation to a proposal. Consequential amendments have been made to refer to "those shares", rather than all of a shareholder's shares, in sections 81 and 82.

Purchase by third party

- 48 An incorrect cross-reference in section 84 has been amended.

No buy out if insolvent

- 49 The redraft of section 86 introduces a "reasonable grounds" test for the opinion of the board on the matters referred to in section 86(1).

Classes and interest groups

- 50 Section 87 has been amended to provide that holders of one class of shares may be divided into two or more interest groups, and will thus vote separately, where a proposal expressly distinguishes between them. This would not result in separation of holders of one class into separate interest groups in situations such as that which arose in Re National Dairy Association of NZ Ltd (1988) NZCLC 64, 198, but would apply in a case such as Alexander v Westeel-Rosco Ltd 93 DLR (3d) 116 (Ontario HCJ), where under an amalgamation proposal a majority holder of ordinary shares in an amalgamating company would receive ordinary shares in the amalgamated company, but the other shareholders in the amalgamating company would receive shares which were redeemable for a fixed price at the option of the amalgamated company.

Alteration of shareholder rights

- 51 Section 88(4), which gives buy out rights to dissenting shareholders in an interest group, has been amended in a similar manner to section 81 [Minority buy out rights], discussed at paragraph 47, to make allowance for voting by a trustee for a number of beneficial owners.

Annual meetings of shareholders

- 52 The changes to section 90(a) are designed to mesh better with section 157 (which deals with balance dates) and to avoid unnecessary complications over "calendar years".

PART 7 - DIRECTORS AND THEIR POWERS AND DUTIES

Meaning of "director"

- 53 The additional references in section 96(1)(b) extend the operation of sections 209 [Powers of a liquidator] and 282 [Disqualification of director] to those who control the board or exercise the powers of a board but are not within the definition of section 96(1)(a). The omission of the reference to section 97 is designed to avoid uncertainty as to the membership of a board. At last "and" has been added after section 96(1)(b).

Major transactions

- 54 Section 99(1) has been rearranged to alter the restrictions on entry into major transactions, reflecting the primacy of the constitution (which may either permit major transactions without a special resolution, or impose further conditions and restrictions in relation to such transactions).

Fundamental duty

- 55 The changes to section 101 recognise that a limited situations (eg, joint venture companies) the constitution may expressly contemplate or require that a director put the interests of one or more shareholders ahead of those of the company itself. The import obligation of good faiths remains in all cases.

Existing shareholders

- 56 The changes of section 102 follow those made to section 101 discussed at paragraph 55.

Qualifications of directors

- 57 Section 115(2) features four distinct changes:
- in paragraph (c), the court is empowered to grant leave for a convicted person to act as a director (eg, where the offence is minor, and the consequences of disqualification would be disproportionate);
 - in paragraph (c), the disqualification consequences of conviction are made non-retrospective;
 - also in paragraph (c), there is recognition that "crime involving dishonesty" is the term defined in section 2(1) of the Crimes Act 1961; and
 - in paragraph (d), the continuing effect of disqualification orders under the 1955 Act is expressly provided for.

Indemnity and insurance

- 58 The changes in section 125 reflect a consideration of policy and permit insurance (where a company retains an incentive to sue an errant director) and treat it separately from indemnity (where there is no such incentive). As the 1990 Act emphasises directors' responsibilities, insurance in the context should not be artificially inhibited. The addition to the definition of "indemnify" in section 125(5) is designed to make it quite clear that contractual exemption clauses are governed by the section.

PART 8 - ENFORCEMENT

Injunction to restrain action

- 59 The changes to section 126(1) extend the availability of the anticipatory injunctive remedy to "entitled persons" (see new definition in section 3(1)).

Personal action by shareholder against directors

- 60 Section 131(2) has been made subject to subsection (3) to overcome any potential difficulty arising from the fact that section 104 imports all duties under the Act, not all of which should be owed to shareholders personally.

Prejudiced shareholders

- 61 In addition to having remedies extended to "entitled persons" (see paragraph 5, above), section 135 [Prejudiced shareholders] has been divided into two in recognition of the different nature of the former subsections (3) and (4) (ie, relating to all shareholders rather than an oppressed minority). The shortened section 135 relates directly to the duties imposed on directors under section 102 [Existing shareholders].

Failure by directors to comply with Act

- 62 As noted in the preceding paragraph, section 135A replaces the previous sections 135(3) and (4). It is more clearly focussed on enforcement of specific duties imposed on directors, and avoids any concept of deemed oppression of all shareholders.

Ratification of directors' acts

- 63 The words "fail to" in section 136(3) produced a result contrary to sense and the sense intended, and have accordingly been deleted.

Court may grant relief

- 64 Section 137 carries forward a jurisdiction for the Court to grant relief in terms similar to section 468 of the 1995 Act. Further research and consideration has led to the conclusion that section 468 is a corollary of section 204 of the 1955 Act which prevents officers and auditors from contracting to limit their liability to the company. As section 125 [Indemnity and insurance] of the 1990 Act is broadly equivalent to section 204 of the 1955 Act but has no application to auditors, the application to auditors of section 137 has been removed.

Information for shareholders

- 65 The new section 138(6) is designed to minimise the costs disincentive facing a shareholder contemplating a challenge to the company's refusal to supply information, and thus enhance the potency of the section as a whole.

Investigation of records

- 66 The changes to section 139 feature the incorporation of the defined term "document" (paragraph 5) and, in subsection (2A), the costs disincentive removal approach mentioned in paragraph 65.

PART 9 - ADMINISTRATION OF COMPANIES

Method of contracting etc

- 67 Section 140 has been rewritten to state more clearly the different manners in which a company may enter into an obligation. In particular, the new section makes it clear that nothing in a company's constitution prevents it being bound if the requirements of this section are complied with, although the constitution may relax those requirements (subsection (1)(a)(iii)). Subsection (2) resolves an uncertainty about whether section 140(1) would apply to contracts entered into outside New Zealand, or governed by foreign law. To the extent that New Zealand law can do so, subsection (2) ensures that a company can enter into an obligation in the same manner in any country, and without reference to the governing law. This is a simple and practical rule.

Dealings between company and other persons

68 In Report No 0 (at paragraph 347) the Law Commission indicated that while there were doubts about the appropriateness of the exception to section 18C(1) of the 1955 Act where a third party "has or ought to have by virtue of his position with or relationship to the company knowledge to the contrary", it did not feel justified in departing from such a recently enacted test. The exception was reproduced in section 142 of the 1990 Act. Subsequent discussions have satisfied the Law Commission that the exception currently creates unwarranted uncertainty in commercial transactions. In the common case of a person entering into a transaction with a company, whose solicitors obtain a search of the company and have either read or had the opportunity to read the articles, it is not clear whether that person has sufficient knowledge of the articles (imputed to him or her) to fall foul of the exception, where action is taken which either clearly contravenes the articles or which would contravene them unless other steps to authorise the action had previously been taken. It is arguable that, even in the latter case, the person concerned is put on inquiry as to the irregularity, and cannot rely on section 18C. This uncertainty is neither necessary nor desirable, and the Law Commission considers that the exception should be deleted. Section 142 has been amended accordingly.

No constructive notice

69 Section 143 benefits from the arrival of a missing comma.

Company records to be kept

70 Section 147 has been rewritten to improve its clarity and reflect the changes to section 66 [Place of register] and the new section 156A [Place of accounting records].

Inspection of records by directors

71 Section 149(1) has been rewritten to improve clarity and to introduce the concept of reasonable notice of desire to inspect and recognise the possibility of records being kept in a non-written form (eg, on a computer system) except where required for inspection.

Address for service

- 72 Section 150(1) features a drafting preference for ``must' over ``shall" in the context, and clarification of the requirement for the service to be on a human representative of the company, while section 150(3) has had superfluous words exercised.

Service by delivery

- 73 Section 154 features a drafting preference for ``must'.

PART 10 - ACCOUNTS AND AUDIT

Place of accounting records

- 74 The new section 156A elaborates and clarifies matters previously dealt with in the former section 147(2).

Content of financial statements

- 75 The addition to section 160(3) recognises that the financial statements of some companies may have to comply with other statutory requirements (eg, regulations under the Securities Act 1978), and that the enforcement provisions of the 1990 Act - eg, section 131(4) [Personal action by shareholder against directors] - may promote such compliance.

Removal of auditor

- 76 Section 170 has been rewritten as part of a revision of the provisions on termination of appointments of auditors, a matter of importance in connection with the independence required of auditors.

Auditor ceasing to hold office

- 77 The rewritten section 171 deals with the various modes of ceasing to hold office as auditor, including death but excluding resignation before the end of the relevant term.

Deemed reappointment of auditor

- 78 The new section 171A is similar to previous 171 but contains additional provisions on the terms and conditions of the reappointment.

Auditors may comment on removal, replacement or resignation

- 79 The new section 171B elaborates the earlier provisions for endangered or departing auditors to have access to the shareholders of a company (in writing, or at a meeting, and at the company's expense) to comment on the threatened or actual departure.

Auditor's report

- 80 Section 172(2), paragraphs (aa) and (ab) adopt from companies in general two recommendations from the Securities Commission's report on Capital Structure and Financial Reporting in New Zealand (December 1989). The provisions are designed to increase understanding of what an audit report is and is not.

Auditor's right of access

- 81 The changes to section 173(1) reflect the introduction of the definition of "documents" in section 3[Interpretation].

Remuneration and relief from liability of auditor

- 82 Section 175(2) has been overtaken by the new section 171B(4); and section 175(3) by the changes to section 137; and, on reflection, section 175(1) is inappropriate as remuneration must be a matter of contract not one to be "fixed" under a constitution.

PART 11 - DISCLOSURE BY COMPANIES

Contents of annual report

- 83 Correction of proofreading slip in section 177.

Other disclosure to shareholders

- 84 Section 179 features a drafting preference for ``must" over ``shall".

Company records available for inspection by shareholders

- 85 The additional paragraph in section 184(1) is designed to ensure that financial information is available even if shareholders have unanimously agreed under sections 176 and 177 to have an annual report or an abbreviated annual report.

Manner of inspection

- 86 Superfluous words in section 185(1) have been excised.

PART 12 - AMALGAMATIONS

Reconstructions

- 87 After careful analysis of section 187, the content and the term ``reconstruction" appeared to add nothing to provisions on amendment of the constitution, class rights, amalgamations and compromises. Deletion removes the potential for confusion.

Amalgamation proposal

- 88 In section 189(1)(i) the substitution of ``consideration" for ``amount of money" recognises the possibility of consideration other than money. The word ``first" has been removed from section 189(1), paragraphs (b), (d), (e) and (g) to better reflect the fact that an amalgamated company may either be a new company or a restructured existing company. the new section 189(1A) is self-explanatory and is linked to the new section 193(2) [Certificate of amalgamation].

Manner of approving amalgamation proposal

- 89 The changes to section 190(1) recognise that only the solvency of the amalgamated company is of relevance. The first change to section 190(4) reflect the general policy that non-compliance does not involve invalidity (cf, section 8(2)). Section 190(4)(a) has been altered to make it clear that constitutional arrangements can qualify or remove the power which shareholders would otherwise have under section 190.

Short form amalgamation

- 90 The changes to sections 191(1) and (2) add the requirement that boards approving a short form amalgamation must resolve (and under the new section 191(4), individual directors must certify) that the amalgamated company will satisfy the solvency test. This provides protection for creditors and, in the case of an amalgamation under section 191(1), the shareholders of the holding company - particularly the minority shareholders. Section 191(5) is the usual offence provision applying where the directors fail to sign a certificate.

Registration of short form amalgamations

- 91 The new section 191(3) ties the short form amalgamation approval procedure into the registration procedure under sections 192 and 193.

Certificate of amalgamation

- 92 The new section 193(2) recognises that an amalgamation may be designed to become effective on a fixed date falling after the date of registration of the amalgamation proposal.

Effect of certificate

- 93 The new section 194(aa) addresses the question of the name of the amalgamated company so as to avoid a separate name registration application where the name is specified in the proposal as that of one of the amalgamating companies.

Recovery of losses by creditors

- 94 the new section 194A has been added to clarify the rights that creditors have in relation to losses suffered as a result of an amalgamation. The section does not refer to shareholders as their rights are dealt with by section 135A.

Powers of Court in relation to amalgamations

- 95 The changes to section 195 reflect the demise of the term "reconstructions" (paragraph 87).

PART 13 - COMPROMISES WITH CREDITORS

Notice of proposed compromise

- 96 In section 199, three separate proofreading slips have been corrected.

PART 14 - LIQUIDATIONS

Commencement of liquidation

- 97 Section 203(1)(b) has been amended to reflect the primacy of the constitution, while section 203(1)(c) extends standing to "entitled persons" (see definition in section 3(1)); and substitutes a reference to the Registrar for that to the Attorney-General.

Interim liquidator

- 98 The change to section 204(1) recognises that urgent steps may be required where assets other than those owned by the company appear to be at risk.

Other duties of liquidator

- 99 An incorrect cross reference in section 208(2)(c)(ii) has been rectified. The saving of validity in section 208 (2)(i) duplicated that in section 8(2) [Capacity and powers], and has been excised.

Powers of a liquidator

- 100 The addition to section 209(2)(b)(v) of "bank officer" is designed to promote the efficiency of the liquidation through enhanced access to financial information held by a bank.
- 101 The new subsections (2A), (2B) and (2C) in section 209 recognise that outsiders required to assist a liquidator ought to be remunerated, and provide for such remuneration to be fixed by the liquidator but subject to revision on application to the Court.

Power of liquidator to make calls

- 102 The new subsections (2), (3) and (4) of section 210 recognise the need for a liquidator to be able to recover from shareholders, former shareholders or (in the 1955 Act terms) members where an earlier liability (eg, as a shareholder in an unlimited liability company) has been reduced (eg, by reregistration as a limited company) but liabilities incurred by the company at that earlier time are outstanding. These provisions are linked with section 46A [Reduction of shareholder liability a distribution] and with section 12 of the Companies (Reregistration) Act 1990 so as to avoid double jeopardy.

Offences, search and seizure

- 103 The changes to section 213 reflect the new definition of "document" in section 3(1) (see paragraph 5).

Persons qualified to be liquidators

- 104 Section 217(3) has been amended to add former receivers to the list of those ordinarily disqualified from being a liquidator, to confer a general dispensation power on the Court, and to recognise that the term defined in the Crimes Act 1961 is "crime involving dishonesty".

Vacancies in the office of liquidator

- 105 The additions to sections 219(4) and 220(1) reflect the new definition of "entitled person" in section 3(1) (see paragraph 5).

Enforcement of a liquidator's duties

- 106 The reference to "committee of inspection" inserted in section 221(2)(bb) is linked to the new provisions in section 242 [Committees of inspection] discussed at paragraph 108.

Preferential claims

- 107 In section 239(2), paragraphs (b) and (c) the references to "taxed" (meaning "revised" - normally in accordance with rules of a court) have been replaced as inappropriate and inconsistent with modern usage. Disputes over these matters may be determined under section 220 [Court supervision of liquidation].

Committees of inspection

- 108 The changes to section 242 reflect a policy change to enhance the position of creditors in a liquidation through a committee of inspection being empowered to make applications under sections 220 and 221 with the costs ordinarily falling on the assets held by the liquidator.

PART 15 - REMOVAL FROM THE NEW ZEALAND REGISTER

Grounds for removal from register

- 109 The changes to section 252(1)(c)(ii) reflect the primacy accorded to express provisions in the constitution of a company, and are similar to those in section 203(1)(b) [Commencement of liquidation]. The additional requirement for a statement in section 252(2) introduces scope for the criminal sanction under section 279 [False statements] to reinforce the integrity of the section 252(1)(c) removal procedure.

Property of a company removed from register

- 110 The amendment to section 257(1) ensures that causes of action of a dissolved company (existence of which may not be known) may be preserved for the benefit of creditors and shareholders, as well as other undistributed property. The substitution of the reference to "public money" in section 257(8) reflects the terms of the Public Finance Act 1989.

PART 16 - OVERSEAS COMPANIES

Application for registration

- 111 The changes to section 259(2) reflect the changes relating to company names made in sections 18 and 20, discussed above.

Registration of overseas company

- 112 Section 260 has been rewritten to reflect deemed registration under section 258(2), and to increase its clarity.

Name of overseas company

- 113 The changes to section 261(1) reflect the changes to section 259(2), discussed at paragraph 111, and through those, changes to sections 18 and 20.

PART 17 - REGISTRAR OF COMPANIES

Powers of inspection by Registrar

- 114 Sections 275A to 275E reflect a change in policy and are to similar effect as - but not identical to sections 9A, 9AA, 9B and 9BA of the 1955 Act. Significant aspects of section 275A include
- the "public interest" threshold in subsection (1)(b) - analogous to that in section 134 [Standing of Attorney-General];
 - the application of subsection (1)(c) to "any person" - expressly including bankers;

- provision for retention of evidential documents in the circumstances specified in subsection (1)(f); and
- a full recognition of legal privilege, including that for settlement negotiations (cf, Rush & Tompkins Ltd v GLC [1988] 3 All ER 737, HL).

Disclosure of information and reports

- 115 The new section 275B has a wider scope than section 9AA of the 1955 Act, extending to reports and to documents or information received from those directly involved in the inspection.

The Official Information Act 1982 and section 275A inspections

- 116 The new section 275C essentially follows section 9AA(3) and (4) of the 1995 Act.

Appeals from decisions under section 275C

- 117 The new section 275D follows section 9BA of the 1955 Act, except for the reference to "15 working days" rather than "21 days".

Inspector's report admissible in liquidation proceedings

- 118 The new section 275E generally follows section 219(3) of the 1955 Act.

Appeal from Registrar

- 119 The new subsections (3) and (4) in section 276 essentially reproduced section 9B(4) of the 1955 Act.

PART 18 - OFFENCES AND PENALTIES

Failure to comply with Act

- 120 The changes to section 277 reflect the insertion of new criminal sanctions in sections 39, 66, 147, 156A, 191, 275A and 275B.

Liability of directors for failure by board or by company

- 121 The changes to section 278 reflect new criminal sanctions in sections 66, 147 and 156A.

Disqualification of director

- 122 The new section 282(6) provides an additional civil sanction against those who breach an order disqualifying them from acting as directors. The sanction involves the personal liability of the banned director for debts incurred by the company while that director acted as such in breach of the Court's disqualification order.

Schedules

- 123 A number of minor drafting improvements have been made to the Schedules. The new Sixth Schedule relates to the new section 78A [Unanimous assent to company action], discussed at paragraph 45.

II Receiverships; Draft Property Law Amendment Act

- 124 The Law Commission's proposals for receivership provisions to be revised and relocated in the Property Law Act 1952 are set out in Chapter VI of Report No 9. the only changes to the draft Property Law Amendment Act that the Commission recommends at this time are those designed to:
- allow for reregistration as the appropriate basis for the transitional scheme from the 1955 to 1990 Companies Act' and
 - correct draft slips.
- 125 The text of the draft Amendment Act sections for which amendments are proposed - sections 104AB [Interpretation], 104AC [Application of this Part], 104AD [Persons qualified to be receivers], 104AL [Other duties of receiver] and 104AO [Liabilities of a receiver] - and a new section 4 are set out below.
- 126 As the 1955 Act will remain in force for three years after commencement of the Property Law Amendment Act, allowance must be made for companies which are subject to that Act. Appropriate changes have been made to the definitions of ``company'', `1`director'', and ``liquidator'' in section 104AB(1) of the draft Property Law Amendment Act.
- 127 The changes made to section 104AC(2)(a) have the effect of applying section 104AD(3), paragraphs (e) to (j) to receiverships commenced prior to the commencement of the draft Act. this recognises the possibility that the events contemplated by those paragraphs could arise after appointment, so that the receiver's authority to act should be withdrawn.

- 128 Section 104AC(2)(c) has been changed to prevent receivers incurring liability under section 104AO(3) in respect of periods prior to the commencement of the draft Act.
- 129 It was intended (see paragraph 762 of Report No 9) that the Court have power, in special circumstances, to permit the appointment as receivers of persons otherwise not qualified. by oversight this was not made clear in the original draft. Section 104AD(3) has been amended to clarify the point and to correspond with the revised section 217 of the draft Companies Act 1990.
- 130 Section 104AL(2) has been changed to allow for the fact that a receiver, while always responsible for the issuing of documents, will in many cases delegate such tasks.
- 131 It was always intended that, in respect of contracts of employment with directors, there would be no personal liability on the receiver unless the receiver had expressly confirmed the contract. Section 104AO(1)(b), as it appeared in Report No 0, suggested the contrary would apply. The provision has been changed to reflect the original intent.
- 132 Section 4 has been added to make necessary consequential repeals of provisions in the Companies Act 1955 and the Industrial and Provident Societies Amendment Act 1952.

III

Charges and Security Interests; Draft Personal Property Securities Act

- 133 In both its April 1989 (NZLC R8) and June 1989 (NZLC R9) Reports, the Law Commission stressed that a new Personal Property Securities Act was an important part of its recommendations for company law reform. The proposed new PPS Act would involve a major simplification of the law relating to chattels securities and the repeal of Part IV of the Companies Act 1955.
- 134 At the time of the draft PPS Act was completed, the contents of the new Companies Act had not been settled, and the Motor Vehicles Securities Act 1989 had not been enacted (although it was before Parliament). Those matters have had an impact on the PPS Act, and are noted in the paragraphs below and in the recommended changes to that draft.
- 135 The commencement of a PPS Act would require the repeal of the Motor Vehicles Securities Act 1989 (and the fees regulations) and is provided for in the amendments to the Third and Fourth Schedules to the PPS Act.
- 136 The register established under the Motor Vehicles Securities Act 1989 would become part of the register under the PPS Act, and this is reflected in the recommended new section 35(2). Preservation of other existing registers is provided for in section 57A(1) to (3).
- 137 Pre-repeal registrations under the Motor Vehicles Securities Act 1989 would be covered by the amended transitional provisions in section 57 of the draft PPS Act, and be able to be amended or discharged under section 38. The new sections 41(2A) and 57A(4) are designed to preserve the confidentiality which attaches to certain information under provisions in the Motor Vehicles Securities Act 1989 not repeated in the PPS Act. Section 57(4) should also be amended to expressly refer to registration of notices as well as security documents under the prior law.

138 The changes to the Second Schedule of the draft PPS Act reflect the repeal of sections 101 and 308 of the Companies Act 1955 contemplated by our draft Property Law Amendment Act (Chapter II, above), and the Companies (Transitional Provisions) Amendment Act (Chapter V, below).

139 The commencement of the Motor Vehicles Securities Act 1989 raises the question of inclusion of special provisions relating to motor vehicles in the PPS Act. Such provisions were set out in Appendix C to our April 1989 Report but, if such provisions are to be included consideration will also have to be given to preservation of a provision on notices about stolen motor vehicles similar to section 9 of the Motor Vehicles Securities Act 1989.

IV Transition: A Draft Companies (Reregistration) Act

- 140 Having developed a new legislative regime for company law which is significantly different from the existing regime and requires replacement rather than amending legislation, the "formidably difficult problem of transition" (the words are those of the Dickerson Committee whose work gave rise to the Canada Business Corporations Act) cannot be avoided. Our June 1989 Report (NZLC R9) did no more than indicate a general approach to transitional issues: see paragraphs 52 to 65. Much more detailed consideration has preceded this report and is reflected in Chapter V, detailing with amendments to the Companies Act 1955, as well as in the present chapter which sets out a draft Companies (Reregistration) Act.
- 141 The broad approach outlined in our June 1989 Report involved new companies being incorporated under and subject to the new regime, with existing companies having a three year period within which to reregister under the new regime, and liquidation as the sanction for failure to reregister within that period. Our further consideration of issues relating to transition has largely confirmed that approach while producing significant amplification and some modifications.
- 142 Our revised proposals (with our draft Companies Act referred to as "the 1990 Act") may be summarised as follows:
- (a) all new companies to be incorporated under the 1990 Act from the date of its commencement;
 - (b) all existing companies to reregister within three years of the commencement of the 1990 Act (11th transitional period");

- (c) the directors of existing companies to take the initiative in adopting a reregistration proposal to be submitted for adoption by shareholders;
- (d) if the shareholders decline a reregistration proposal, the directors would then prepare another proposal designed to preserve all existing rights, entitlements, duties and liabilities of members of the existing company;
- (e) if no steps to reregister are taken by an existing company, it is to be deemed to have reregistered with the constitution presumed (in the absence of express provisions) by the 1990 Act (but disadvantaged shareholders to be entitled to seek the appointment of a liquidator or relief against the directors); and
- (f) the 1955 Act to be repealed at the end of the transitional period.

The deemed reregistration option

143 In discussions subsequent to the publication of our June 1989 Report, the Department of Justice noted that in Manitoba company law reform has proceeded with a new regime immediately applying to existing companies but with certain transitional provisions. Section 261(2) of the Manitoba Corporations Act 1976 provides in part:

Notwithstanding any provision of this Act, where any provision of [the existing constitutional documents] of a corporation ...

- (a) that was in force immediately prior to the date this Act comes into force; and
- (b) that was not unlawful under the law as it was immediately prior to the date this Act comes into force; is inconsistent with, repugnant to, or not in compliance with, the provisions of this Act, such provisions are not invalid, a nullity or illegal, solely by reason of that inconsistency, repugnancy, or non-compliance, until two years from the date this Act comes into force ...

144 We have considered the potential for applying the Manitoba approach in relation to the 1990 Act but have concluded that it should not be followed. Perhaps the major reason for that conclusion is the avoidance of confusion and uncertainty. The 1955 and 1990 Acts employ different concepts and terminology and companies registered under the 1955 Act will have a memorandum and articles of association reflecting the structure, concepts and terminology of the 1955 Act which in all probability will be substantially different from a constitution adopted for operation under the 1990 Act after proper consideration. On the Manitoba approach, there would be a significant degree of "inconsistency, repugnancy, [and] non-compliance" between 1955 Act constitution and the provisions of the 1990 Act. We reiterate our agreement with the Albereta approach which regarded the one-time cost of filing new documents [as] a lesser evil than the long-term cost of trying to live indefinitely with constitutional documents which do not fit in with the legislation.

145 In addition, we are optimistic that the new 1990 Act regime will survive for at least a generation - the 1955 Act has already survived for 35 years - and consider that a longer term perspective justifies an allowance of time for putting the new regime on a proper footing at the outset. At the same time, a transition period and individually considered reregistration proposals provided fair opportunities for those involved in corporate activity to fashion a constitutional document which preserves the expectations and distribution of powers provided by the existing company structure.

Timetable

146 Timetables are essentially arbitrary, and reasonable people may disagree about appropriate time limits in particular circumstances. The period of three years suggested in our June 1989 Report was the same as that favoured by the farmers of the Canada and Alberta Business Corporations Acts, and seems to us to be realistic if there are not to be undue demands placed on, in particular, professional advisers and the Companies Office itself. Given that there are in excess of 150,000 companies on the Register at present, a three year transition period still calls for an average reregistration tally exceeding 1,000 per week.

147 On the other hand, the adoption of the 1990 Act will reflect a judgment that the 1955 Act is no longer suitable and it follows that its departure should not be unduly delayed. We have no doubt that the permanent existence of two company law systems would be costly and confusing but that the longer term gains justify a dual system for a limited transitional period.

Shareholder protection

148 As will be seen from the draft Companies (Reregistration) Act contained in this chapter, the reregistration procedure contemplates initiatives by directors but provides significant shareholder protections. Those protections include

- the requirement for reregistration proposals to be certified by directors as not unfairly prejudicial or unfairly discriminatory against any member;
- the requirement that the directors' reregistration proposal be submitted to shareholder meetings for approval by special resolution (except where all members agree in writing);
- the provision for applications to restrain submission of directors' registration proposals to the Registrar;
- the provision for a second (section 6) reregistration proposal to preserve existing rights and entitlements of members, and to be circulated to members with sufficient time for challenges; and
- the remedies against the company (appointment of liquidator, or application for relief under section 135 of the 1990 Act) or the directors (under section 9) for shareholders who have been disadvantaged where no specific reregistration proposal has been registered during the transitional period.

Failure to reregister

149 Perhaps the most significant modification to the general scheme outlined in our June 1989 Report relates to the consequences of failure to reregister during the transitional period. As mentioned above, the June 1989 Report proposal was that liquidation would be the sole sanction for such a failure. given that the three year transitional period gives a fair opportunity for such proposals to be developed and processed, and that remedies can be crafted for those members who are disadvantaged by the company being deemed to have the constitution provided by the 1990 Act itself, mandatory liquidation does not seem necessary.

- 150 In relation to companies limited by shares (which most existing companies are), the major difficulty likely to be encountered by a deemed registration in accordance with the Second Schedule will relate to the standardisation of entitlements attaching to shares. Thus, in those companies where there is a special class of share which preserves the power or interest of one shareholder or class of shareholder, the effect of a deemed reregistration will be to reduce that share to the status of all other "ordinary" shares. However, in most cases it may be expected that the holder of such a share will be at least aware of, and perhaps deeply involved in, development of a reregistration proposal, and the need for such shareholders to avail themselves of the remedies provided seems likely to arise only very rarely.
- 151 The position of companies other than those limited by shares is somewhat more complex as the 1990 Act requires shares as an essential component of companies registered under that Act, and presumes limited liability. This complexity is reflected in the alternative forms provided under the Second Schedule. In addition, it may be anticipated that the Registrar will use the requisition powers set out in the Third Schedule at a rather earlier date in relation to these unusual companies for which deemed registration is required.
- 152 The removal of liquidation as the sanction for non-reregistration as prevents a potential distortion of bargaining power as between various shareholders within a company in negotiating a reregistration proposal. In other words, if liquidation were the sole sanction, there could be situations where one group of shareholders in a company - those likely to be less adversely affected by liquidation than another group with which they were negotiating - could use the reregistration process as an opportunity to re-negotiate the contract underlying the formation of the company. The risk of that distortion is also addressed by the terms of the section 6 second reregistration proposal, and by the range of remedies provided in sections 9, 10 and 11.

Reduction of liability

- 153 Section 12 of the draft statute recognises the possibility of reregistration reducing liabilities of shareholders, and treats any such reduction as a distribution so as to enable the operation of the "claw back" of sections 46(1) and (3) of the 1990 Act. It is analogous to section 46A [Reduction of shareholder liability a distribution] of the 1990 Act.

 - (i) the extent of any loss or damage suffered by the applicant as a result of the registration of the company under section 8; and

- (2) On an application under this section the Court shall make an order appointing a liquidator unless
 - (a) the applicant is acting unreasonably in seeking to have the company put into liquidation; or
 - (b) the company resolves, prior to the hearing of the application, to amend its constitution in such a manner that the emended constitution no longer materially adversely affects the applicant; or
 - (c) an order is made under section 9 which adequately compensates the applicant for any loss or damage he or she may have suffered.
- (3) Where an order appointing a liquidator is made under this section, the liquidation shall proceed
 - (a) as if the company had not been registered under the Companies Act 1990 but had remained registered under the Companies Act 1955 with the memorandum of association and articles of association of that company as at the expiry of the transition period; and
 - (b) as if section 210A of the Companies Act 1955 applied to the liquidation.

11 Application of section 135 of 1990 Act to registration

Where a company has been registered under the Companies Act 1990, a shareholder may make an application to the Court under section 135 of that Act in connection with the registration of the company, but the Court may not set aside that registration on such an application.

12 Reduction of member's liability on registration

- (a) any share held by him or her prior to that registration; or
- (b) in the case of an unlimited company or a company limited by guarantee, any undertaking to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up;

13 Offences

Every person who acts in contravention of or fails to comply in any respect with any of the following provisions of this Act, or any requirement imposed under any such provision, namely

3 In the case of an unlimited company or a company limited by guarantee, if the company has a share capital, paragraph 4 in the form set out above should be replaced with the following paragraph:

4(a) The number of A shares of the company on [date of expiry of transition period] is [number of persons who are members of the company other than by reason only of holding a share in the company as set out in the latest return furnished by the company under section 130 of the Companies Act 1955].

(b) The number of B shares of the company on [date of expiry of transition period] is [number of shares in company that are issued as at that date].

(c) Every person who is a member of the company other than by reason only of holding a share in the company on [date of expiry of transition period] is deemed to have been issued one A share in the company on that date, and no further consideration for issue of that share need be paid by any such person.

(d) Every share in the company on [date of expiry of transition period] is deemed to be a B share as of that date.

(e) The following are terms of every A share of the company:

(i) the holder agrees to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being liquidated while he or she is a shareholder, or within three years afterwards, for payment of the debts and liabilities contracted before he or she ceases to be a shareholder, and the costs, charges and expenses of liquidation, and for the adjustment of the rights of shareholders among themselves, such amount as may be required [(in the case of a limited company) not exceeding the sum specified in the memorandum of association].

- (ii) the holder of an A share may at any time surrender that share to the company by notice in writing to the company without any payment by the company, and without affecting any liability of that shareholder to the company under subparagraph (i). A share surrendered in accordance with this subparagraph is deemed to be cancelled.

- (f) The B shares specified in this paragraph have attached to them the liability to make the payments specified, if the holder is called on to do so by the board [list or describe any shares in respect of which capital is shown as uncalled in the latest return furnished by the company under section 130 of the Companies Act 1955 - if there are no such share, write ``nil"].

- (g) The board may not issue any A shares in the company."

THIRD SCHEDULE

REQUISITIONS BY THE REGISTRAR

- 1 At any time following the expiry of the transition period, the Registrar may require a company which is deemed to have submitted an application for registration, or any person who is or appears from the registers kept for the purposes of the Companies Act 1955 to be a director of such a company to either
 - (a) confirm the correctness of the terms of the application for registration which that company is deemed to have submitted; or
 - (b) provide information relating to:
 - (i) the number of directors holding office on the date of expiry of the transition period;
 - (ii) the full names and addresses of the directors of the company on the date of expiry of the transition period;
 - (iii) the membership of the company on the date of expiry of the transition period;
 - (iv) the number of shares of the company issued as at the date of expiry of the transition period;
 - (v) the amount (if any) uncalled in respect of any share of the company as at the date of expiry of the transition period.

- 2 The Registrar may
 - (a) specify a period, being not less than 20 working days from the day of receipt of the request, within which any confirmation or information requested under paragraph 1 must be provided;
 - (b) require any confirmation or information requested under paragraph 1 to be verified by a statutory declaration by the person from whom it is request or, in the case of a request to the company, by one or more directors of that company.

- 3 Where information has been requested and provided under paragraph 1, the application for registration which is deemed to have been submitted by the company is to be treated as incorporating that information in place of the information which appears in the registers kept for the purposes of the Companies Act 1955 and is specified in the form set out in the Second Schedule.
- 4 Every person who fails to comply with a requirement imposed by the Registrar under paragraph 2 may be convicted of an offence under section 13 [Offences].

V

Transition: A Draft Companies (Transitional Provisions) Amendment Act

- 154 Given reregistration as the favoured process for bringing existing companies under a new Companies Act (the subject of Chapter IV, above), the topic of transition also raises the question of immediate application to existing companies of some of the reforms proposed in our June 1989 Report: in other words, the question of amendments to the 1995 Act to apply during the three year transitional period contemplated for reregistration.
- 155 As indicated in our June 1989 Report (see paragraphs 52 to 54), we consider that it would be necessary to be selective in applying new reforms to existing companies. Further consideration has confirmed our views on that point. In particular, we recommend against major changes to the 1995 Act provisions which deal with shares and shareholders. Such provisions are closely interrelated and often reflect a careful arrangement of power between various shareholders and between shareholders generally and directors. Further, on all matters where immediate application of reforms is contemplated it is necessary to recognise that the 1955 and 1990 Acts have a different structure, and employ different concepts and terminology. Such considerations are reflected in the limits and complexity of the draft Companies (Transitional Provisions) Amendment Act set out below.
- 156 The draft Amendment Act also provides the vehicle for various repeals, consequential amendments and savings provisions (although the Act Interpretation Act 1924 contains savings provisions of general application). It should be noted that the structure of the draft Amendment Act is unorthodox in collecting together the repeals, savings provisions and insertion relating to a particular topic, rather than simply listing all repeals and amendments. The object of this approach is to clarify the effects of the draft Amendment Act.

- 157 The definitional difficulties of immediate application of some reforms is reflected in section 2 and the First Schedule of the draft Amendment Act. As these provisions indicate, the new Companies Act does not employ the terminology or concept of "member", "contributory", "Memorandum or Articles of Association" or "winding up".
- 158 Section 3 of the draft Amendment Act gives effect to the logical corollary of commencement of a new Companies Act: that all new companies should be incorporated under that Act, and not under the 1955 Act.
- 159 Most of the remaining provisions of the draft Amendment Act either import various provisions from the new Companies Act into the 1955 Act, or export self-contained areas to be dealt with under provisions of the new Act. Thus the appointment of the Registrar would, under section 4 be dealt with under the new Act but be recognised expressly in the 1955 Act. Conversely, the directors' duties imported into the 1955 Act through section 9 of the draft Amendment Act essentially replicate those in the new Companies Act (sections 101 to 113).
- 160 Section 7 of the draft Amendment Act is designed to bring section 18C of the 1995 Act into line with the revised section 142 of the new Companies Act (see the commentary at paragraph 53 of Chapter I, above). Similarly, section 8 of the draft Amendment Act would import sections 140 and 141 of the 1990 Act into the 1955 Act, and with consequential changes to sections 4 and 5 of the Property Law Act 1952.
- 161 As mentioned above, section 9 of the draft Amendment Act imports the restatement of directors' duties from the 1990 Act - and also the disclosure of directors' interests provisions. The corollary of those duties is enhanced effectiveness of their enforcement, hence the importation through section 10 of the shareholder enforcement provisions from the 1990 Act.
- 162 The effect of sections 11 and 12 of the draft Amendment Act is to export the areas of amalgamation, compromises with creditors, liquidations and removal from the registrar to Parts 12 to 15 of the 1990 Act, and repeal Parts VI and XI of the 1955 Act. An express jurisdiction for liquidation of insolvent associations would be inserted as a new section 17A of the Judicature Act 1908 (see Fourth Schedule to the draft Amendment Act).

- 163 Section 13 of the draft Amendment Act provides for the position of overseas companies to be governed by Part 16 of the new Companies Act alone.
- 164 In comparison with the 1955 Act, the new Companies Act contains fewer offences provisions but with increased maximum penalties. Section 14 of the draft Amendment Act and the Third Schedule (which is in the form of drafting instructions only) are designed to eliminate major discrepancies between the criminal sanctions under the two Acts during the transitional period.
- 165 The topic of takeovers has been dominated by discussion of provisions applicable to major listed public companies, and the report of the Securities Commission on that topic has been under active consideration by the Government. In that report, the Securities Commission confirmed the widely held opinion of that the Companies Amendment Act 1963 provisions on takeover are ineffectual. That view also underlaid our June 1989 Report, and section 15 of the draft Amendment Act would both repeal the 1963 Amendment Act and import a provision equivalent to section 178 of the new Companies Act.
- 166 Section 16 of the draft Amendment Act deals with several miscellaneous matters:
- (a) section 86 of the 1955 Act [Vesting shares of debentures of deceased holder without requiring Probate or Letters of Administration] would be repealed and replaced by a better located provision in a new section 64A of the Amendment Act 1969;
 - (b) section 97 of the 1955 Act [Perpetual debentures] would also be relocated as a new section 75A of the Property Law Act 1952; and
 - (c) sections 98 to 100 of the 1955 Act would be repealed and not replaced on the basis that, while possibly relevant to public issues of debenture stock (and appropriate to be considered for retention in the Securities Act 1978), they are irrelevant to core company law; and corresponding provisions in the Industrial and Provident Societies Amendment Act 1952 would also be repealed.

167 In summary, these proposals - together with those in the other chapters of this Report - would effectively remove the following Parts from the 1955 Act at the commencement of the transition period;

- (a) Part IV - Registration of charges;
- (b) Part VI - Winding up
- (c) Part VII - Receivers and managers;
- (d) Part XI - Winding up of unregistered companies;
- (e) Part XII - Overseas companies; and
- (f) Part XIII - Insurance companies.

Directors' duties

9 Directors' duties

- (1) The principal Act is amended by inserting, immediately after section 180, the following sections:

``180A Management of company

The business and affairs of a company shall be managed by or under the direction of the board of the company who shall have all powers necessary for that management except to the extent that the constitution of this Act expressly requires those powers to be exercised by the members or any other person.

180B Delegation of powers

- (1) Subject to this Act and to any restrictions in the constitution of the company, the board of a company may delegate, either formally or informally (including by course of conduct), to a committee of directors, any director or employee of the company, or any other person, any one or more of its powers other than its powers under section 17 of the 1990 Act.
- (2) A board that delegates any power under subsection (1) is responsible for every exercise of the power by the delegate, as if the power was exercised by the board, unless the board
 - (a) believes on reasonable grounds at all times before the exercise of the power that the delegate will exercise the power in conformity with the duties imposed on directors of the company by this Act and the company's constitution; and
 - (b) has monitored, by means of reasonable methods properly used, the exercise of the power by the delegate.

180C Fundamental duty

- (1) The fundamental duty of every director of a company, when exercising powers or performing duties as a director, is to act
 - (a) in good faith; and
 - (b) in a manner that he or she believes on reasonable grounds is in the best interests of the company, except insofar as this obligation is limited by the constitution in accordance with subsection (2).
- (2) The constitution of a company may provide that a director may, when exercising powers or performing duties as a director, act in a manner which he or she believes on reasonable grounds is in the best interests of a member or group of members, or any other entitled persons, notwithstanding that such action may not be in the best interests of the company.

180D Existing members

A director of a company must not, when exercising powers or performing duties as a director, act or agree to the company acting in a manner that unfairly prejudices or unfairly discriminates against any existing member of the company, unless the director

- (a) believes on reasonable grounds that the duty set out in section 180C [Fundamental duty] requires him or her to do so; or
- (b) is acting in accordance with a provision in the constitution which permits him or her to act in a manner which he or she believes on reasonable grounds is in the best interests of a member, or group of members, or any other entitled persons.

180E Creditors and employees

A director of a company may, when exercising powers or performing duties as a director, have regard to the interests of creditors and employees of the company, but nothing in this section limits the duties or obligations of directors set out in this Act.

180F Compliance with constitution and this Act

A director of a company must not act or agree to the company acting in a manner that contravenes the constitution of the company of this Act.

180G Solvency

- (1) A director of a company must not agree to the company entering into a contract or arrangement or acting in any other manner unless he or she believes at that time on reasonable grounds that the act concerned does not involve an unreasonable risk of causing the company to fail to satisfy the solvency test.
- (2) A director of a company must not agree to the company incurring an obligation unless he or she believes at that time on reasonable grounds that the company will be able to perform the obligation when required to do so.
- (3) (a) For the purposes of this section, a company satisfies the solvency test if
 - (i) it is able to pay its debts as they become due in the normal course of business; and

- (ii) the realisable value of the company's assets is greater than the aggregate of the present value of its liabilities, whether contingent or otherwise.
- (b) In determining whether a company satisfies the solvency test regard may be had either to financial statements prepared on the basis of accounting practices and principles that are reasonable in the circumstances, or a fair valuation or other method that is reasonable in the circumstances.
- (c) In this subsection, "realisable value", in relation to any asset, means the price that would be paid for that asset by a willing but not anxious buyer to a willing but not anxious seller.

180H Standard of care of directors

Every director of a company, when exercising powers of performing duties as a director, must exercise the care, diligence and skill reasonably to be expected of a director acting in like circumstances.

180I Use of information and advice

Every director of a company, when exercising powers or performing duties as a director, may accept as correct, reports, statements, financial data and other information prepared, and professional or expert advice given, by any of the following persons to the extent only that the director acts in good faith, after reasonable inquiry when the need for inquiry is indicated by the circumstances, and without knowledge that would cause such acceptance to be unwarranted:

- (a) any employee of the company when the director believes on reasonable grounds to be reliable and competent in relation to the matters concerned;
- (b) any professional or expert person in relation to matters which the director believes on reasonable grounds to be within the person's professional or expert competence;
- (c) any other director, or committee of directors upon which the director did not serve, in relation to matters within the director's or committee's designated authority.

180J Meaning of "interested"

- (1) Subject to subsection (2), for the purposes of this Act, a director of a company is to be treated as interested in a transaction to which the company is a party if and only if the director
 - (a) is a party to or will or may derive a material financial benefit from the transaction; or
 - (b) has a material financial interest in another party to the transaction; or
 - (c) is a director, officer or trustee of another party to, or person who will or may derive a material financial benefit from, the transaction (not being a party or person that is a related company of the company); or
 - (d) is the parent, child, or spouse of another party to, or person who will or may derive a material financial benefit from, the transaction; or
 - (e) is otherwise directly or indirectly materially interested in the transaction.
- (2) For the purposes of this Act, a director of a company is not to be treated as interested in a transaction to which the company is a party if the transaction comprises only the giving by the company of any security to a third party which is unconnected with the director, at the request of the third party, in respect of a debt or obligation of the company for which the director or another person has personally assumed responsibility in whole or in part under a guarantee, indemnity, or by the deposit of a security.
- (3) Sections 180K [Disclosure of interest] and 180L [Transactions may be avoided] do not apply
 - (a) to any remuneration or other benefit given to a director in accordance with section 180P [Remuneration and other benefits]; or
 - (b) to any indemnity given or insurance provided in accordance with section 180Q [Indemnity and insurance].

180K Disclosure of interest

- (1) A director of a company who is interested in a transaction or proposed transaction with the company, must forthwith after becoming aware of the transaction or proposed transaction disclose to the board of the company by notice in writing, the nature and extent of the director's interest.
- (2) For the purposes of subsection (1), a general notice in writing to the board to the effect that a director is a member, director, officer or trustee of another named company or other person and is to be regarded as interested in any transaction which may, after the date of the entry or disclosure, be entered into with that company or person, is a sufficient disclosure of interest in relation to any such transaction.
- (3) A failure by a director to comply with subsection (1) does not affect the validity of any transaction entered into by the company or the director, but the director commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $10,000.

180L Transactions may be avoided

- (1) A transaction entered into by the company in which a director the company is in any way interested may be avoided by the company within three months of the transaction being disclosed to all the members (whether by means of the directors' annual report or otherwise), unless the company receives fair value under the transaction.
- (2) For the purposes of subsection (1), the question whether a company receives fair value under a transaction shall be determined on the basis of the information known to the company and to the interested director at the time the transaction is entered into.
 - (a) where a person seeking to uphold a transaction knew of the director's interest at the time the transaction was entered into, the onus of establishing fair value is on that person;
 - (b) in any other case, the company has the onus of establishing that it did not receive fair value.

- (5) Subject to subsection (1) and to the constitution of a company, no transaction entered into by the company in which a director is interested shall be liable to be avoided, nor shall any director be liable to account to the company for any profit realised by any such transaction by reason only of such interest.
- (6) The avoidance by a company of any transaction under this section does not affect the title or interest of a person in property which that person had acquired
 - (a) from a person other than the company; and
 - (b) for valuable consideration; and
 - (c) without knowledge of the circumstances of the transaction under which the second-mentioned person acquired the property from the company.

180M Interested director may vote etc

Subject to the constitution of a company, a director of the company who is interested in a transaction entered into or to be entered into by the company may

- (a) vote in respect of the transaction; and
 - (b) attend any meeting of directors and be included amongst the directors present for the purpose of a quorum; and
 - (c) sign any documents relating to the transaction on behalf of the company; and
 - (d) do any other thing in his or her capacity as a director in relation to the transaction;
- as if he or she was not interested.

180N Use of company information or opportunity

- (1) Where a director of a company has information in his or her capacity as director or employee of the company (being information that would not otherwise be available to him or her), the director must not disclose that information to any person, or act on the basis of that information, other than
 - (a) for the purposes of the company; or

- (b) as required by law; or
 - (c) in accordance with subsection (2) or subsection (3); or
 - (d) in accordance with section 108K [Disclosure of interest].
- (2) A director of a company may disclose any information to any person who is named in a written notice previously given to the board as a person in accordance with those directions or instructions the director may be required or is accustomed to act in respect of his or her duties and powers as director.
- (3) A director of a company may disclose, use, or act on the basis of any information if
- (a) a written notice seeking authorisation of, and setting out particulars of such disclosure, use, or act is given to the board; and
 - (b) the director is authorised to do so by the board; and
 - (c) the company receives fair value in respect of the disclosure, use, or act.

1800 Directors' share dealings

- (1) A director of a company who acquires or disposes of shares or other securities issued by the company or a related company, or a direct or indirect interest in such shares or other securities, must forthwith after the acquisition or disposal is made, disclose to the board by notice in writing the number and type of shares acquired or disposed of, the consideration paid or received therefore and the date of acquisition or disposal.
- (2) Where a director of a company has information in his or her capacity as a director or employee of the company or a related company (being information that would not otherwise be available to him or her) and that information is material to an assessment to the value of the shares or other securities issued by the company or a related company, the director may acquire or dispose of any such shares or other securities, or a direct or indirect interest therein, only if

- (a) in the case of an acquisition, the consideration given for the acquisition is not less than the fair value of this securities or interest acquired; or
 - (b) in the case of a disposition, the consideration received for the disposition is not more than the fair value of the securities or interest disposed of.
- (3) For the purposes of subsection 20, the fair value of any securities or interest therein is to be arrived at on the basis of all information known to the director or publicly available.
- (4) Subsection (2) shall not apply in respect of any security or interest acquired or disposed of by a director only as a nominee for the company or any related company.
- (5) For the purposes of this section and without limiting the meaning of the term "interest", a director of a company has an interest in securities if another body corporate holds or has an interest in them and either
- (a) that body corporate, or its board, are accustomed or required to act in accordance with the director's directions or instructions; or
 - (b) the director is entitled to exercise or control the exercise of one-third or more of the voting power at a meeting of that body corporate.

By inserting after section 64 the following section:

“64A Vesting of shares or debentures without administration -

- (1) This section applies to
 - (a) a company within the meaning of the Companies Act 1955; or
 - (b) a company within the meaning of the Companies Act 1990, which has issued shares or debentures.
- (2) In this section “value”, in respect of shares, means the amount paid up on the shares and, in respect of debentures, means the amount owing under the debentures.
- (3) Where the registered holder of shares or debentures dies, whether before or after this Act, and the value of the shares or debentures does not exceed $9,000, the directors of a company to which this section applies may resolve that any person be registered as the holder of the shares or debentures who proves to their satisfaction
 - (a) that he or she is entitled to be so registered under the will or intestacy of the deceased holder; or
 - (b) that he or she is entitled to obtain probate of the will of the deceased holder or letters of administration of that person's estate; and
 - (c) that in neither case has any grant of probate or letters of administration been made or resealed in New Zealand in respect of the deceased holder; and
 - (d) that the Commissioner of Inland Revenue has been notified of the proposed resolution and is satisfied either that

- (i) the value of the shares or debentures is less than $9,000; or
- (ii) death duty will not be payable in New Zealand in the estate of the deceased holder."

Flat and Office Owning Companies: A Draft Land Transfer Amendment Act

168 The topic of flat and office owning companies was discussed as paragraphs 256 to 261 of our June 1989 Report (NZLC R9), and was not specifically addressed in the draft Companies Act contained in that Report (referred to in this chapter as "the 1990 Act"). In essence, the 189 Report made the following points:

- the registration of licence provisions contained in the Companies Amendment Act 1964 cannot simply be repealed;
- those provisions relate to registration under the Land Transfer Act 1952 and conceptually and logically should be relocated in that Act;
- existing flat and office owning companies could have some difficulty in operating under the 1990 Act; and
- the future of such companies should be considered in a general review of the land statutes, including the Unit Titles Act 1972.

169 Further research and consultation has broadly confirmed those proportions save that flat and office owning companies seem likely to have less difficulty in operating under the 1990 Act than we were initially inclined to believe.

THE COMPANIES ACT 1995

170 At present, flat and office owning companies receive particular attention in three areas of the Companies Act 1955;

- (a) s 62 - subsection (1) (d), (2) and (3) were inserted by the Companies Amendment Act 1963 as an exception to the general prohibition of financial assistance being provided by a company for the purchase of its own shares;
- (b) s 80A - was inserted by s 2 of the Companies Amendment Act (No 2) 1965 to reverse the effect of the Court of Appeal decision in Jenkins v Harbour View Courts Ltd [1966] NZLR 1 (that the grant of licences and leases by flat and office owning companies amounted to an illegal return of capital to shareholders) but that section imposed an implied term permitting creditors or a liquidator to seek forfeiture of such grants where the company is wound up; and
- (c) the Companies Amendment Act 1964 - providing for the registration under the Land Transfer Act 1952 of licences to occupy issued by flat and office owning companies to shareholders.

171 The Commission's considered view is that relevant parts of section 62 of the 1955 Act should continue (along with all other provisions relating to shares and shareholders) during the three year transition period - as should section 80A - but be repealed along the rest of the 1955 Act at the end of that period. In relation to section 80A, there should be an early amendment to provide (and warn) that the implied term created by subsection (2) will be revoked on the repeal of the 1955 Act (see further paragraph 12, below). The 1964 Amendment Act should be repealed but its provisions should become a new Part of the Land Transfer Act 1952 with definitional modifications to enable its application to companies registered under both the 1955 and 1990 Acts, and with provisions dealing with penalties and service of notices brought into line with the 1990 Act.

172 The history of flat and office owning companies in New Zealand seems to date from the early 1950s when the "block share" was pioneered as a way around the problem posed by the inability, under the Land Transfer Act 1952, to issue separate titles to parts of buildings. Investigation of departmental files suggests that, although governments were not unsympathetic to such a development in the 1950s, there was a reluctance to pass any specific legislation. But in the early 1960s as urban growth and owner-occupier flats proliferated - and new strata title legislation was repeatedly delayed - the various amendments to the 1955 Act set out in paragraph 3, above, were enacted.

- 173 The present use of the flat or office owning company structure appears not to be extensive. Our consultations suggest that this form of development has been largely eclipsed by the Unit Titles Act 1972. The Companies Office register does not reveal the present number of flat and office owning companies but it is possible that no such companies have been registered since the commencement of the Unit Titles Act 1972. In addition, many eligible licences have not been registered under the 1964 Amendment Act.

OPERATING UNDER THE 1990 ACT

- 174 The Commission believes that the 1990 Act offers sufficient flexibility for flat and office owning companies to operate and that special provisions in the Act for such companies are neither necessary nor desirable. This will mean only changes from the position under the 1955 Act (for example, as to Companies Office fees - see section 449(2) of the 1955 Act).
- 175 Under the 1990 Act, a flat or office owning company would make it clear that the rights attached to shares explicitly include (cf, section 26(1) of the 1990 Act) the occupancy rights of interest to a potential shareholder. The removal of the capital maintenance rules which underlay the 1955 Act avoid the need to make any legal distinction between the sale of a share in a flat or office owning company and the grant of occupation rights (or a lease or licence). In other words, the occupancy rights will be one of the bundle of rights associated with the share as an item of property. However, those rights can also be seen as an interest in land. Thus transactions relating to them need to be in writing to conform with the Contractors Enforcement Act 1956. Further, the evidential requirements of the land transfer registration system justify continuation of the present use of a document which is executed by both parties and evidences the occupancy rights involved.
- 176 One point mentioned in our Report No 9 was a possible need of modification of the definition of "distribution" in section 2 of the draft Act. It was thought that this term might be taken as referring to the issue and/or transfer of shares in a flat or office owning company and create unhelpful complexities. After further consideration were are satisfied that occupancy rights are not (and should not be) covered by the definition of "distribution" which is confined to "transfers", and expressly excludes transfers of the company's own shares. Nor, we believe, is it possible to argue that occupation rights can be separated out from other rights as "other property" - a share is no more than a form of property (see section 26(1)); further, it is difficult to argue that the transfer is "in respect of ... shares" (as are, for example, dividends) in terms of the definition. Finally, the structure of Part 5 of the 1990 Act - in which the issue of shares is dealt with prior to and separately from the topic of distributions - is consistent with this approach.

177 It may be appropriate to record explicitly that the reasoning in Jenkins has no application under the 1990 Act. All questions touching on return of capital are effectively covered by the statute itself and there is no room for common law rules relating to maintenance of capital. That being so, there is no reason or basis for avoiding the contract between a company and its shareholders to issue shares carrying rights to occupancy.

178 Share certificates have less significance under the 1990 Act than under the 1955 Act. Nevertheless, there is provision for their issue on request under section 71 of the 1990 Act. For the purposes of the transfer and registration of occupancy rights under the proposed amendment to the Land Transfer Act, the present documentation and practices would remain unchanged.

CONSEQUENTIAL STATUTORY AMENDMENTS

179 The need for the Joint Family Homes Act 1964 and the Unit Titles Act 1972 to apply in respect of companies registered under the 1990 Act as well as those registered under the 1955 Act has given rise to most of the minor consequential amendments set out in drafting instructions contained in the Schedule of the draft Land Transfer Amendment Act. In addition to changes reflecting different terminology (including abandoning the term "officer"), provisions concerning offences and service of notices should be made consistent with the 1990 Act. Consistency of definition in this area justifies the one change proposed for the Stamp and Cheque Duties Act 1971.

CREDITORS AND FORFEITURE

180 We considered whether creditors of flat and office owning companies might have placed reliance on the forfeiture power given by section 80A(2) of the 1955 Act and would be adversely affected by its repeal. We are satisfied that this is not the case and, more importantly, that the forfeiture power is potentially far-reaching and quite disproportionate. Creditors of such companies will normally be protected by their contractual remedies (for example, sale by a mortgagee) or their ability to enforce (ultimately through judgment and/or winding up and appointment of a receiver or liquidator) the directors' powers to seek contributions from the shareholders. That leads us to recommend that not only should section 80A be repealed but that the implied term which subsection (2) has created should be expressly revoked on the repeal of the 1955 Act. Nevertheless, it is appropriate to provide some warning of the impending repeal of the section 80A(2) remedy. We therefore recommend that a new section 80B be inserted expressly declaring that all terms implied by subsection (2) will be deemed to be revoked on the repeal of the 1955 Act: see the draft set out in the Schedule.

IMPLEMENTATION

181 In preparing a draft Land Transfer Amendment Act to reflect these proposals, the Law Commission has had regard to the fact that it would form part of the Land Transfer Act 1952. The inclusion in that Act of the provisions at present contained in the Companies Amendment Act 1964 does not provide the opportunity for a thorough-going review of the substance and the drafting of the land transfer legislation.

A WIDER REVIEW

182 The Law Commission's further work on this topic has confirmed the need for a comprehensive review of the law relating to strata titles and other forms of subdivided land ownerships. The publication of consultative paper on "Flathold" in late 1989 by the Department of Justice is a useful initiative, and the Commission expects to have early discussions with the Department on this topic.

THE DRAFT AMENDMENT ACT

183 Some of the points which may be noted in our draft Land Transfer Amendment Act, as compared with the Companies Amendment Act 1963, include the following:

- Alterations have been made to:
 - convert to gender neutral language
 - separate provision into separate subsections
 - break up lengthier passages into separate subsections
 - remove unnecessary cross-references
 - refer to the "Registrar", not the "District Land Register", as in the Land Transfer Act 1952 itself.
- Definitions added are:
 - "share register" (to distinguish between the old and new Companies Acts)
 - "company" (to distinguish between the old and new Companies Acts) (the old definition was discarded as superfluous)
 - "constitution" (to distinguish between the old and new Companies Acts).
- Definitions deleted are:
 - "relative shares of the licensee" replaced in the text with "shares to which the licence relates"
 - "registered" appeared redundant in a Part of the Land Transfer Act 1952.
- Definitions changed are:

``flat or office owning company" amended to incorporate the type of structure envisaged for 1990 Act companies

``licence to occupy" amended to incorporate the type of structure envisaged for 1990 Act companies (see limb (b) of the definition)

``licence to occupy" amended by deleting part of the original definition and moving it into a separate subsection (3) to cover both limbs of the definition without repetition

``licence to occupy" amended by deleting part of the original definition and moving it into a separate subsection (3) to cover both limbs of the definition without repetition

``licence to occupy" amended by deleting the corresponding definition of licensee which appears superfluous ``licence to occupy" amended by deleting the reference to articles.

- Substantive changes in the balance of the draft Act include:

section 121O which takes advantages of the improved notice provisions of the new Companies Act

``register" used in place of ``register book" to better accord with the usage in the Land Transfer Act section 121B(4) added to take account of the new form of licence replacement of offence and penalty provisions to accord with the 1990 Act (eg section 121F(5) and (6)) section 121G(b) which addresses the fact that constitutional changes could alter the terms of a licence, the registered version of which may only ``evidence" the grant.

new licence the mortgage registered against the former licence or, if there are more mortgages than one, such of them as the licensee specifies.

- (2) Upon registration of the new licence the Register shall record against it the mortgage or mortgages specified in the request in the order of their registered priority, and thereupon the new licence shall be deemed to be subject to the mortgage or mortgages accordingly, and the provisions of section 104 of the Property Law Act 1952 shall apply as if the licensee had acquired the licence by conveyance or transfer subject to the mortgage or mortgages so recorded.
- (3) Where any mortgage or mortgages are recorded against a new licence pursuant to this section, all references in any such mortgage to the licence or to the estate or interest of the licensee thereunder shall be deemed to be references to the new licence or, as the case may be, to the estate or interest of the licensee thereunder.

cf 1964, No 42, s 12

121L Registration of transfer of licence or new licence

- (2) The Register shall refuse to register any licence issued by a company in the place of any other licence registered in the Registrar's office, unless and until that other licence has been cancelled, revoked, rescinded, or surrendered, and the cancellation, revocation, rescission or surrender has been registered under subsection (3) of section 121J.

cf 1964, No 42, s 13

121M Transfer of shares on exercise of power of sale by mortgagee of licence a transfer to itself or, as the case may be, to that other person of the shares to which the licence relates as if the mortgagee had been duly appointed to be the attorney of the licensee for that purpose by an irrevocable power of attorney.

- (2) On the presentation to it of a transfer of those shares duly executed pursuant to this section and otherwise in due form, the company shall, subject to any provision in its constitution requiring the approval of the directors or of the company to the transfer, register the transfer accordingly. cf 1964, No 42, s 14

- (a) any mortgage registered against any land of a flat or office owning company is discharged; and
- (b) a new mortgage is registered against the land to secure (whether to the same mortgagee or not) an amount not exceeding the amount secured by the discharged mortgage immediately before it was discharged; and
- (c) the new mortgage contains a statement to the effect that it is in replacement of the discharged mortgage and that the money advanced thereunder was used for the purpose of repaying the money previously secured by the discharged mortgage, the new mortgage shall have the same priority in relocation to registered licences affecting the land or any part thereof as was enjoyed by the discharged mortgage immediately before it was discharged.

VII

Insurance Companies: A Draft Insurance Companies' Deposits Amendment Act

- 184 Part XIII of the Companies Act 1955 contains a dozen sections dealing with the regulation and liquidation of companies carrying on insurance business. The draft Companies Act ("the 1990 Act") contained in our June 1989 Report contains no equivalent provisions. That omission was deliberate and based on the premise that insurance company regulation did not fit comfortably in a statute concerned with core company law, as well as on the expectation that the provisions in Part XII could be relocated in other legislation (see paragraph 73 of our June 1989 Report).
- 185 A brief survey of the miscellaneous pieces of legislation which impact on the business of insurance has persuaded us that this is an area which requires a separate and more fundamental review in due course. In the meantime, however, the provisions presently located in Part XIII of the 1955 Act can conveniently be relocated as a new Part II of the Insurance Companies' Deposits Act 1953 (to be renamed) and that is the effect of the draft Amendment Act set out below. After consultation with offices of the Department of Justice, we decided that it was possible to streamline the provisions contained in Part XIII without major re-examination of the underlying policies, and that is reflected in the draft Amendment.
- 186 It will be seen that the proposed new Part II of the 1953 Act deals with the following matters:
- definitions and scope;
 - a minimum capital or deposit requirement;

- a prohibition on proposals for insurance containing applications for shares;
- power for the Registrar, under the control of the Secretary for Justice, to apply for the liquidation of an insurance company (widely defined to include entities other than companies); and
- power for the Registrar to investigate insurance companies (as so widely defined).

187 It should be noted that the new Part II does not carry forward the distinction between local and overseas companies carrying on a non-life insurance business which is a feature of Part XIII of the 1955 Act. Further, the requirement for local insurance companies to file periodical statements in accordance with the Twelfth Schedule to the 1955 Act (see section 418) has been dropped. This follows advice from there Department of Justice that the requirement serves no practical purpose.

188 The new Part II is designed to apply to companies registered under either the 1955 or the 1990 Acts (as well as the other entities caught by the definition of "insurance company" in the new section 29), and to link with the liquidation and Registrar's inspection provision in Parts 14 and 17 of 1990 Act.

189 It may be as well to conclude by reiterating that the drafting and policies contained in our draft Insurance Companies' Deposits Amendment Act are designed to maintain the status quo, and do not reflect a considered policy preference - or drafting style - adopted by the Law Commission.

“statutory demand” has the meaning set out in section 223 [Statutory demand].

202 Purposes of this Part

The purpose of this Part is to establish that

(a) liquidation is a process which requires a company to cease carrying on business and its assets to be collected, realised and distributed in accordance with this Part; and at the completion of the liquidation a company is ready to be removed from the New Zealand register in accordance with Part 15.

203 Commencement of liquidation

(1) A company may be put into liquidation by the appointment of a named person, or of an Official Assignee for a name district, as liquidator by

(a) those shareholders entitled to vote and voting on the question, by special resolution;
or

(b) the board of directors or any other person, if the constitution of the company so requires or permits <<,by resolution passed at a meeting of the board>>; or

(c) the Court, on the application of the company or of any <<shareholder, director or creditor of the company,>> director, shareholder or other entitled person, or any creditor of company, or of the <<Attorney-General>> Registrar, if the Court is satisfied that

(i) the company is unable to pay its debts; or

(ii) the company or the board has persistently or seriously failed to comply with this Act; or

(iii) the company does not comply with section 5 [Essential components]; or

(iv) it is just an equitable that the company be put into liquidation.

(2) The liquidation commences on the date on which the liquidator is appointed.

204 Interim liquidator

(1) Where an application has been made to the Court for an order that a company be put into liquidation, the Court may appoint a name person or an Official Assignee for a named district as interim liquidator on the ground that the appointment is necessary or expedient for the preservation of the value of the <<company's>> assets owned or managed by the company.

(2) An interim liquidator has all the powers, duties and entitlements of a liquidator, unless the Court limits the powers or places conditions on their exercise.

205 Effect of commencement of liquidation

(1) As from the commencement of the liquidation of a company

(a) the liquidator takes custody and control of the company's assets;

(b) the directors remain in office but cease to have any powers, functions or duties other than those required or permitted to be exercised by this Part;

(c) no person may commence or continue legal proceedings against the company or with respect to its property, or enforce any other remedy against property of the company, unless the liquidator otherwise agrees or the Court otherwise orders;

(d) no share of the company may be transferred or other alteration made in the rights or liabilities of any shareholder, and no shareholder may exercise any power under the company's constitution or this Act, other than this Part;

(e) the constitution of the company may not be altered.

(2) Subsection (1) does not affect the right of a secured creditor to take possession of and realise or otherwise deal with any property of the company over which that creditor has a charge, subject to compliance with section 232 (4)(b) [Rights and duties of secured creditors].

206 Completion of liquidation

The liquidation of a company is complete when the liquidator files with the Registrar a final report and final accounts of the liquidation and a statement that:

(a) all known assets have been disclaimed, realised or distributed without realisation;

(b) all proceeds of realisation have been distributed; and

(c) the company is ready to be removed from New Zealand register.

Duties, powers and entitlements of liquidator

207 Primary duty of liquidator

The primary duty of a liquidator is to take, in a reasonable and expeditious manner, all steps necessary to collect, realise and distribute the assets or the proceeds of the assets of the company to its creditors in accordance with this Part, and, if there are any surplus assets, to the persons entitled to them under the company's constitution and this Act.

(g) keep accounts and records of the liquidation and permit those accounts and records, and the accounts and records of the company, to be inspected by

(h) retain the accounts and records of the liquidation and of the company for not less than six years after the completion of the liquidation, unless the Court orders otherwise;

(i) in every document issued by the liquidator on the company's behalf, give notice that the company is in liquidation <<, but failure to comply with this paragraph does not affect the validity of the document>>.

(6) An application to the Court for an order that a company be put into liquidation on the ground that it is unable to pay its debts may be made by a contingent or prospective creditor only with the leave of the Court; and the Court may give such leave, with or without conditions, only if it is satisfied that a prima facie case has been made out that the company is unable to pay its debts.

(3) No extension of time may be given for making or serving an application to have a statutory demand set aside, but, at the hearing of the application, the Court may extend the time for compliance with the statutory demand.

(4) The Court may grant an application to set aside a statutory demand if it is satisfied that

(a) there is a substantial dispute whether the debt is owing or is due; or

(b) the company appears to have a counterclaim, set-off or cross-demand and the amount specified in the demand less the amount of the counterclaim, set-off or cross-demand is less than the prescribed amount; or

(c) the demand ought to be set aside on other grounds.

(5) If, on the hearing of the application, the Court is satisfied that there is a debt due by the company to the creditor that is not the subject of a substantial dispute or is not subject to a counterclaim, set-off or cross-demand, the Court may

(a) order that the company pay the debt within a specified period and that, in default of payment, the creditor may forthwith make an application to put the company into liquidation; or

(b) dismiss the application and forthwith make an order under section 203(1)(c) [Commencement of liquidation] putting the company into liquidation; on the ground that the company is unable to pay its debts.
